Tariff and Foreign Trade to Be Discussed in Monday Address.

By Thomas L. Stokes, United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—Herbert Hoover completed preparations today for his invasion of Massachusetts Monday in question of votes in that sharply contested area.

The Republican candidate put the finishing touches upon the address he will make Monday night in the Boston arena, in which he will discuss the tariff and foreign trade and sound the keynote of "prosperity" which will dominate his eastern campaign.

The Republican candidate will have a full schedule on his Massachusetts visit.

His special train will stop for fifteen minutes at Springfield at 8:30 Monday morning, and for the same time in Worcester, where it arrives at 10:05.

Hoover will greet those at the station from the rear platform, but will make no speeches.

Welcome by City

He and Mrs. Hoover and the official party will leave the train at Newtonville at 11:15 and ride for an hour and a half through the suburbs of Boston.

The city will welcome him officially on historic Boston Common at 1 o'clock through Mayor Nichols. The candidate will make a brief speech in reply.

State Republican leaders will entertain Hoover and Mrs. Hoover at an official luncheon. The candidate will spend the afternoon at the home of Governor Fuller, where at 3 o'clock he will receive representatives of the Republican Service Men's League and various groups of citizens of foreign birth.

Fuller on Program

Francis Prescott, State Republican chairman, will preside at the meeting in the arena. Hoover will be introduced by Governor Fuller. The candidate will speak from 8 to 9 over a radio hook-up covering the entire country. He will leave for his return to Washington at 10 o'clock, arriving here Tuesday morning.

Controversy over the religious issue was brought into the presidential campaign again last night when Senator Smoot, Utah, and former Governor Arthur Hyde, Missouri, issued statements from Republican national headquarters criticizing John W. Davis, 1924 Democratic presidential candidate, for a radio speech on religious liberty.

John D. Rockefeller Jr. is getting a lot of pleasure out of the Rockefeller-financed restoration work in the historic city of Williamsburg, Va., "birthplace of the nation," these pictures indicate.

Below are Rockefeller, one of the world's richest men, and Uncle Alex Pleasants, one-time slave and Williamsburg's oldest resident. It was hard to convince Uncle Alex he actually was meeting the great John D. Jr. and Rockefeller got a good laugh out of his doubts.

URGES ALIEN BAN

10,000 Moose Hear Davis in Attica.

By Times Special
ATTICA, Ind., Oct. 13.—"If immigration bars were let down, millions from foreign lands would crowd around factory gates seeking employment at virtually any price," declared Secretary of Labor James J. Davis in an address here Friday night.

Davis warned against the abolishment of restrictive immigration and praised the Republican party for its record of dealing with immigration and the tariff.

"Every year between 250,000 and 300,000 aliens are admitted to this country," said Davis. "Every year 250,000 come from rural districts to seek employment in industrial centers. Every year 2,000,000 young people come to the age of employment. Shall we add to this enormous number the millions of hungry aliens who line the shores of Europe gazing with longing eyes at America's mill districts?"

Davis' address at the Republican rally Friday night followed a celebration attended by approximately 10,000 members of the Loyal Order of Moose, of which Davis is national director.

PERFECT MOUNT FOR GUNS TO FIGHT PLANES

Ordnance Officers Try Out New Weapon Carrier at Proving Grounds.

By Science Service
WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—A new type of mount for anti-aircraft guns, which practically will be as mobile as ordinary field artillery carriages and yet as solid and stable as a firing base as the concrete foundations now necessary, is being tried out at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds near here.

Ordnance officers declare themselves very well satisfied with the new device, whose existence has only recently been made public, after more than a year of secret preliminary work.

The mount is a radical departure from the wheeled types hitherto tried for anti-aircraft artillery. These shook and shifted so much under the stress of firing that they were all discarded. The new mount consists of four long steel beams that lie flat on the ground. Each leg is jointed, and is pivoted at the point of attachment to the gun platform, so that it can be folded compactly alongside it, and the whole lifted on rubber-tired wheels to be towed by a tractor or truck.

The mount can be prepared for action from march order in about ten minutes. Concrete gun foundations, the only other type giving comparable stability under firing conditions, require several days for their preparation.

The gun used on the new mount is the recently adopted standard three-inch army anti-aircraft piece, which throws a fifteen-pound shell to a height of 12,000 yards and an extreme horizontal range of 19,000 yards. Crack gun crews have worked up a firing speed of thirty rounds a minute with this gun, thus enabling a battery of four pieces to attack a plane with something over a quarter of a ton of steel and TNT in the space of a minute.

A feature of the new gun is the easy removability of the liner or inner tube when it has become worn out with constant firing or otherwise damaged. The old liner can be taken out and a new one slid into place, under field conditions, in about thirty minutes. This will enable a battery to keep the field constantly, avoiding slow and costly returns to the arsenal for relining.

By Times Special
KOKOMO, Ind., Oct. 13.—John Aspy continues to hold his position as city fire chief, despite conviction of violating the liquor law for which he was sentenced to pay a fine of $400 and serve 150 days at the penal farm.

So far there has been no indication from Mayor S. E. Spurgeon that he intends to dismiss Aspy, who plans to take an appeal. The Spurgeon regime is Klan-controlled, according to recent allegations of Charles Etchison, discharged fireman, who led to indictment of Aspy, Lloyd Morgan, a fireman, and George Gibbs, works board member, on liquor charges.

Morgan, dubbed the fire department's official bootlegger, has been convicted. Gibbs will go on trial in Howard Circuit Court here Monday.

Dailey, Democratic nominee for Governor, addressing a crowd which packed the Martz Theater here Friday night.

Deploping the fact that "government in Indiana has been the worst in the Union," Dailey said: "If you are in doubt how Indiana stands before the Nation, write your friends outside the State and they will tell you!"

"There are not enough Democrats in Indiana to accomplish the house cleaning, and honest, upright Republicans are in a minority in their party. But together we can do it."

Accompanying Dailey on his appearance here were Jap Jones of Martinsville, Democratic candidate for treasurer of State; Glen J. Gifford of Tipton, candidate for judge of the Appellate Court, and Arthur Hamrick, candidate for Secretary of State. County Chairman Claude Louke presided.

STUMP URGES SOLUTION OF FARM ISSUE

Candidate for Senator Is Speaker at Broad Ripple Democratic Rally.

Business and labor generally will be benefited by solution of the farmer's problem, Albert Stump, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, declared addressing a Democratic rally in Broad Ripple Friday night.

"When farming becomes profitable the thirty million people on the farms will begin to improve their living conditions," Stump said. "Manufacturing will be stimulated by a desire to satisfy the needs and desires of this new market and employment will be plentiful."

"The laborer, too, being steadily employed, will improve the standards of his living and further stimulation to industry will come to his good fortune. Industry, now stagnating for lack of its best market, will be vitalized into new activity."

Defend Honor of State

Stump supported platform pledges of his party to bring about farm relief. Turning to State affairs, he said:

"I have heard some of those whose acts have embarrassed the State of Indiana speak of the honor of our country and the importance of defending its honor against every assault."

"Is not the gravest insult to our Nation's honor to be found in such conduct on the part of those charged with the responsibility of public service that it breaks the confidence of the public in their own institutions of self-government and induces them to regard the institutions of freedom as affording the opportunities for corruption and graft?"

Louis Ludlow Speaks

Referring to the recent action of the Indianapolis Ministerial Association in calling upon Methodists to pray for the outcome of the election, John H. Aiken, former judge of Ft. Wayne, declared:

Frank C. Dailey Named for Governor During Speech.

Dailey for Governor in self-respect and good citizenship to rebuke the Republican party for the betrayal through its office holders and managers of the confidence of the State," Evans Woollen, Indianapolis, exhorted a large audience here Friday night.

"I shall not retell," Woollen said, "the story of that betrayal. The shame of it is freely admitted by Republicans of the type to whom I am putting the question about their votes this autumn."

"We can not expect results under party government unless the party in power is held to responsibility. We have party government, not personal government, and the guilt of the party's representative is the guilt of the party."
