Changes May Be Made in A. A. U. Rules

Bitter Controversy Expected Over College and University Athletes.

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY

United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Several radical changes in the rules of the Amateur Athletic Union will be advocated at the fortieth annual convention of that body at New York on Nov. 18, 19 and 20.

Among the more important changes are the following:

1. A college or university athlete may elect to compete for his school or club, but not for both.

2. A swimmer who accepts a position as lifeguard thereby disqualifies himself for further competition as an amateur.

3. Disqualification of any athlete who allows his name to be used to advertise the goods or apparatus of any firm, manufacturer or agent either for compensation or otherwise.

The efforts of the central association of the A. A. U. with headquarters at Chicago to have the first rule written in the A. A. U. constitution may cause a bitter controversy. The rule, if passed, would prevent any track star or swimmer from representing a club during the years he competes for his college.

Most of the support of the proposed change will come from the middle west, where a similar rule has been in effect in the Big Ten conference for several years. The passage of this rule would be a severe blow to the eastern and California clubs which draft most of their athletes from college stars.

John T. Taylor, chairman of the national A. A. U. swimming committee, advocates the passage of the rule which would bar any swimmer who served as a lifeguard.

The A. A. U. has always ruled against athletes who allow their names to be used for advertising purposes, but the rule now applies only to those who receive compensation for such permission.
