

Republican Women of State Meet

Republican women of Indiana met Thursday noon in the ball room of the Columbia Club under the auspices of the Indiana Hoover Club to hear Mrs. Edward E. Gann, sister of Senator Charles Curtis, nominee for Vice-President on the Republican ticket, present her talk on "Herbert Hoover." More than 500 were present, including Republican vice chairmen from all parts of the state.

The speakers' table was arranged with a center plateau of pom poms shading from yellow to orange, with similar smaller plateaus at either end. Four pale green lighted tapers completed the decorations.

At the speakers' table were Mrs. Gann, Mrs. Charles Arthur Carlisle, South Bend, who presided and introduced the speakers; Mrs. Curtis Hodges, Mrs. Arthur Robinson, Mrs. Ovid Butler Jameson, Mrs. John N. Carey, with whom Mrs. Gann stayed while in Indianapolis; Miss Dorothy Cunningham, Republican national committee woman from Indiana; Miss Mary Sleeth, state vice-chairman; Mrs. James E. Watson and Mrs. Louise M. Dodson, Chicago; Mrs. Margaret Hill McCarter, Kansas, spoke briefly, as did each guest seated at the speakers' table.

MODERNISM MADE RESTFUL

Angles, lines and circles are used in dozens of different ways to decorate everything in the man's modern room pictured at the top. From the silver and tan wall paper to the deep brown rug with touches of green, all designs are geometric. For a more conservative modern, this bed takes a severe design for its frame, with artistic inlays of silver wood and ivory in blowing arcs.

Those Folk Who Never Are Pleased

BY MARTHA LEE

There are mother-in-law problems, jealous husbands, lazy husbands, faithless sweethearts, triangles, unruly children—all the problems that human beings are bothered with, but here's one that hasn't been brought up lately that I bet plenty of persons have bobbing around. The man who cannot please! Am I right?

You know there are persons who simply can't imagine anything being absolutely perfect. And they are right. There isn't anything absolutely perfect. Not around this globe at least. But, since there isn't anything perfect, and everyone admits it, why not take the next best thing, which is all you can have anyway if you really want something? And after taking it, why hold a post mortem over it?

I once knew a man who was so hard to please he couldn't even please himself. He would go into a restaurant and order tomato soup. From then on he would decide a million reasons why he shouldn't have ordered tomato soup until by the time it came he was too sick with consternation to eat it. If he were playing bridge and bid clubs, he practically lost the hand wondering and talking about how much better it would have been if he had gone spades. And there you are. When folk get to the stage where they can't even please themselves, it is time to move on.

I have a letter from a woman today who is in contact with just such a person. She is fortunate, though. She isn't married to him. She just keeps house for him. There's a catch to it, though. She loves him.

Dear Miss Lee: I am a young woman and have one child. I am keeping house for a man and I have fallen in love with him. I love him with all my heart, but he is too hard to please. I am considered a good housekeeper and good cook and am always neat and clean.

But I do not know what is the matter with him. It makes no difference how hard I try to please him, there is always something wrong. I can't say anything but what he takes the opposite opinion to it. I am beginning to wonder whether he is trying to make me dissatisfied with him. I do not want to leave him, but I am afraid I will have to.

He seems always to want to be working and never mentions taking me out any place. I like to keep my work up and he is just too hard to please. I am one like a little pleasure once in a while. If we do happen to go some place on Sunday afternoon, he will start talking almost before we get started about how nice home is. Is there anything I could do to make him more satisfied?

WORRIED.
You are very foolish to stay around where he is, working for him and making yourself miserable. Why tie yourself down to a man who makes you miserable even before he has married you? That is utter stupidity, for you even to consider marrying him if he cannot approve of anything you do beforehand. If he loves you at all, the only way he will find out, or if he does not, the only way you'll ever find out is to get away from him. Let him eat the steak and boiled potatoes some one else has prepared for a while. Since things cannot be perfect, the only way we can appreciate their near perfection is to compare them with something inferior. If you are any good at all, comparison should help your cause. Give yourself a chance.

Honor Worthy Matrons
Associate matrons of the Indianapolis chapters, O. E. S. entertained with a 1 o'clock luncheon Thursday at the Marrott hotel in honor of worthy matrons. ## THREE GOWNS DISPLAYING NEW EVENING MODE

Women and Men Differ About Gold

BY MRS. WALTER FERGUSON

Are women too mercenary? Do they expect too much from their husbands?

A correspondent contends that the answer is "yes" and that multitudes of husbands find life almost unbearable because they are so hounded by their families for more money.

Alas, this can not be denied, although it will certainly not apply to all wives. However, women are far more likely to let themselves be miserable without money than are men.

There are types of men to whom money-making is natural. It is a passion for power with them. They like the thrill of acquiring more and more gold so that they can have more and more notice and homage of a sort.

But few men wish money only for the luxuries it can buy. Not but that all of them do not like luxuries and ease. But for men and women, the terms mean such widely different things.

Given his pipe, a dressing gown, a pair of old slippers and his own devices, the average man is content. A woman wants much more. She desires feathers on her negligee, silken cushions and beautiful surroundings before she is satisfied and the chances are she won't be then.

Men are just about as happy in modestly furnished homes provided they can have their pet possessions. They like good food, soft beds, some liberty. Practically all things else are useless amenities.

Women, on the other hand, desire all that and everything the neighbors have besides. If it were not for our restlessness and envy, goodness knows what the American merchant would do.

It follows naturally that very often a good man, a kind husband and father is made unhappy by the incessant complaints of a wife who has only a moderate income. She whines perpetually because Mrs. Jones next door has luxuries which she can not afford. And in nine cases out of ten, Mr. Jones with all his money can't hold a candle to her own husband when it comes to decency and constancy.

Wo women, of course, are the great reformers. But have we, too, not made up a god of gold?

Card Party Tonight
Division No. 10, L. A. O. H. will entertain with a card party this evening at 8:30 at St. Joseph's hall.

Lois Chambers, Ralph Valodin Wed Thursday

Miss Lois Florence Chambers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Chambers, 2942 North New Jersey street, became the bride of Ralph Valodin, son of Mrs. W. A. Valodin, 3003 North Illinois street, Thursday at the home of the Rev. Joseph G. Moore, pastor of the Capitol Avenue Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Hobart, Cincinnati, O., were the attendants. The bride wore an autumn brown tulle frock with accessories to match and a shoulder corsage of yellow tea roses.

Following the ceremony a breakfast was served at the Marrott hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Valodin left immediately for a motor trip. The bride was graduated from Butler university. Mr. Valodin attended Northwestern university and is a member of Acadia.

Mr. and Mrs. Valodin will be at home after Nov. 15 at 3207 North Illinois street.
