"I can't help it"
[But she could!]
The woman who still gives in to painful periods has not heard of Midol. Non-narcotic. No effect on the natural process. But it stops the pain. Acts directly on the organs affected and takes effect in five to seven minutes. Furthermore, the woman who anticipates and takes a tiny tablet of Midol beforehand will experience no pain at all. Try to realize what Midol means! Try to believe that it does really and truly relieve the pain. No matter how hard a time you're always had! Obtainable at any drug store, in a trim aluminum case for 50c.—Advertisement.

SPEND FIFTY YEARS TOGETHER

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bruner, 1519 Park avenue, will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage Wednesday with open house.

A PROTECTING APRON

6252. Printed linen was chosen to make this practical apron. Being sleeveless it is cool and comfortable, with straps over the shoulders, supporting crosswise yoke band. Ample and convenient pockets are arranged on the front, and hold the belt. One could make this model in saten with trimming of cretonne or in gingham with piping in a contrasting color or an edging of rick rack braid.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. To make a medium size will require 3 1/2 yards of 27-inch material. To make yoke bands and belt of contrasting material will require 1/2 yard 27 inches wide. To finish with bias binding as illustrated will require 8 yards.

Every day The Times prints on this page pictures of the latest fashions, a practical service for readers who wish to make their own clothes.

Obtain this pattern by filling out the above coupon, including 15 cents (coin preferred), and mailing it to the Pattern Department of The Times. Delivery is made in about a week.

Evening Wedding in Church

The St. Paul Episcopal church was the scene of an early winter wedding at 8:30 Saturday evening when Mrs. Florence Lavin Hassler, daughter of Mrs. Herbert McDowell, 5836 Beechwood avenue, became the bride of James H. Ryan, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Ryan, New Holland, Mich.

The altar was decorated with palms and white chrysanthemums and lighted with seven-branch candelabra. Two large white baskets of chrysanthemums flanked either side of the altar. Each pew was lighted with a white candle. Dr. Lewis Brown, pastor of the church, read the service.

Clarence Carson, organist, played a group of bridal airs while the guests were being seated by the ushers, Larue Byron, Joseph Negger, O. M. Jones and William Meredith. Glen Friemond sang "At Dawning" and Mrs. Florence Kinnaird "Because."

Attended by Sister

Mrs. E. H. Jarrard, Cincinnati, O., sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a fitted bodice and long full skirt, appliqued with rose velvet flowers. There was a rose velvet bow on one shoulder and streamers hanging to the floor. Her slippers were pale green satin. She wore a tulle cap and a crystal and pearl necklace, the gift of the bride. Her flowers were a shower of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. F. G. McMillan, Indianapolis, and Mrs. R. C. Lavin, Washington, D. C., were bridesmaids. They wore gowns fashioned with tight basques and long ruffled skirts with velvet bows with streamers to the floor. They both carried shower bouquets of roses and wore white gold filigree pins, gifts of the bride.

Mrs. McMillan wore rose taffeta with rose satin slippers, and Mrs. Lavin's gown was pistachio shade. She wore pale green satin slippers. They both wore tulle caps to match their gowns.

Little Helen Patricia Miers, dressed in a frock of pale green taffeta, was ring-bearer. She wore a wreath of roses in her hair and carried the ring in an American Beauty rose. Jean Jarrard, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a frock of pale green and scattered rose petals from a wreath that hung from the left shoulder.

Mrs. Lavin Drybroth was mistress of ceremonies. She wore a white tulle robe de style with white satin slippers and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and the bride's white bouquet.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, R. C. Lavin. She wore a gown of flesh colored chiffon and tulle made with a basque waist and bouffant skirt of tulle ruffles that reached the floor. She had a tulle cap made with a chin strap. Her only jewelry was a strand of seed pearls. Her slippers were flesh colored with toes and heels studded with rhinestones. Her bouquet was shell pink roses and valley lilies tied with rose tulle.

Reception at Church

An informal reception was held in the chancel of the church after the ceremony. Followed by a reception at the Columbia Club. The long bridal table was decorated with roses and two silver candelabra held lighted rose and green tapers. Mrs. McDowell received in a beige lace gown with a shoulder corsage of shell pink roses. Mrs. Ryan wore gray transparent velvet with a shoulder corsage of roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryan are on a motor trip through the east, the bride traveling in a midnight blue dress with accessories to match. They will be at home after Dec. 1 at 1434 North Delaware street.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Ryan, Miss Margaret Ryan and Mrs. Paul Ryan, New Holland; Mr. and Mrs. Guy Stewart, Champaign, Ill.; J. J. Duffin, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Lavin, Washington, D. C.; Miss Florine Tilton and Helen McConnell, Greensburg, and Mr. and Mrs. James M. Lavin, Asbury Park, N. J.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

BY MARILYN
Padraic Colum stood before the Contemporary Club, a small, well-built man in crumpled evening clothes. His face was an eternally young face and his manner hesitant and very gentle. He spoke easily and casually with little formality of his contacts with Irish literary figures. He spoke of the noblest Roman of them all—George Bernard Shaw—of Lord Dunsany, of Yeats, whom he and all the younger Irish poets adore.

He told of walking down the streets of Dublin one day with Yeats and of how Yeats said to him, "Think of it in the last ten years what with Einstein's discoveries the whole world and its way of thinking has been changed, and now little the world realizes it!"

He spoke of Yeats' philosophy as coinciding with that of Spengler's in his "Decline of the West." Never have I heard those extremely high-brow ideas of Spengler summarized so succinctly and so clearly as by this small man from the south of Ireland whose voice is the voice of a poet and whose eyes are the eyes of a visionary.

Explains Spengler
Spengler, he said, promotes the idea that every civilization is a complete and isolated unit in itself learning nothing and taking nothing from any other civilization. It is useless to talk of going back to the Greek simplicity, because it is impossible. We can't revert to anything because we can express only what we are. Every civilization expresses throughout its development one basic idea. The idea of our civilization which began about the time of Christ is the conquest of space.

It was thrilling to hear Padraic Colum, simple, charming personality that he is, interpret these ideas so simply.

Then he recited a few of his poems—intoned them the way A. E. does. He has a delectable sense of humor when he talks, but his poetry is full of all the woes of all of Ireland.

Robert Frost His Favorite

Of our modern American poets he likes Robert Frost best, who gives him a real sense of his native New England there. He read "Some" there is that doesn't love a wall.

In reciting a long poem by Yeats, he forgot one line. Whereupon he began to pace the platform with a most distracted air murmuring in pealing contrition, "Oh, what will you do to me if I have forgotten that lovely poem?"

He was distracted, too, about the idea of having to catch a 10 o'clock train that night. He confided all his troubles to his audience in so adorably naive a fashion that we all suffered too.

In an appreciative audience were Mrs. Stuart Dean, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Wolf, Mrs. Kurt Pantzer, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Norvell, Dr. Jane Ketcham, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson, Miss Marietta Finley, Mrs. Robert Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hornbrook.

A most unusual honor has been bestowed upon Ann Hodges, who was graduated last year and who is now in her first year at the University of Wisconsin. She has been elected to membership in the Poetry Society there, which is practically unheard of for a freshman.

Between Too Much Playing Around and Marrying in Early Youth, Is Right Time

BY MARTHA LEE
MOST of the letters from young married women lament the fact that their problems have been the result of a too hasty marriage. Either they have married on too short an acquaintance, or they have married too young. Persons, as a general rule, simply refuse to be warned by other's experiences. They must, instead, start out for themselves and stores up a series of bitter experiences before they can believe in the wisdom of others. And that, after all, is what one would call believing. All of which means it probably won't do any good to advise these what one sees.

SPEAKER

Miss Alma Iske

An account of her experiences in China will be told by Miss Alma Iske at a tea to be given at the Y. W. C. A., Sunday, the last day of the world's Week of Prayer. Miss Iske recently returned from China, where she was working as a missionary.

Entertains for Mary Adams, to Be Wed Saturday

Miss Mary Florence Malott entertained today with a luncheon-bridge at her home, 4268 Washington boulevard, in honor of Miss Mary Anne Adams, whose marriage to William Macomber will take place at 8:30 Saturday evening at the First Baptist church.

The luncheon table held a centerpiece of pink roses and was lighted with pink tapers in silver holders. Among out-of-town guests were Miss Betty Bowerford, Ft. Wayne, and Miss Elizabeth Coulter, Frankfort, who will be bridesmaids, and Miss Helen Smith, Philadelphia, Pa., house guest of Miss Malott.

Miss Evelyn Barnes, who will also be a bridesmaid, will entertain Tuesday in honor of Miss Adams, Wednesday her aunt, Mrs. William Ray Adams, will be hostess for a luncheon-bridge in her home. Mrs. William Henry Junglauss will have a party Thursday, and Friday Mr. and Mrs. Roy Elder Adams will give the bridal dinner for their daughter and Mr. Macomber at the Indianapolis Athletic Club. The bridesmaids' luncheon will be given Saturday by Mrs. Macomber, Kendallville.

It is not best for one to have a good time, make friends and be ready to decide the great question when the time comes that to lose many old friends for this one who at one time was a B. H. By all means, especially since you are in doubt about your feelings for this boy, continue your other friendships. You can surely make him see that, if he wishes to be friends with you at all, it will be necessary for him to accept your decision.

Convention to Indianapolis

Mrs. Effie Decker, Michigan City, was re-elected president and Indianapolis was chosen as the next meeting place of the Service Star Legion, at the close of the organization's annual convention in Evansville.
