

Dishonesty One Sin in Marriage Neither Man Nor Wife Should Forgive

BY MARTHA LEE

THERE are many things unpleasant that are almost necessary to put up with in married life, because it is so human to err in one way or another. Dispositions that clash, incidents that lead to misunderstandings, unexplained jealousy, poverty, infidelity, all these are, unfortunately, a part of some marriages.

If a wife or a husband sincerely wishes that the marriage be a success, they must start out with the idea that it is part of the game to forgive mistakes, to be reasonable in giving in, when quarrels have led to hot words and anger. He must be willing to share equally with his wife the hardships that are to be gone through, the same as she shares his hardships.

But there is one thing neither of them need put up with and that is dishonesty. A man or woman who will be dishonest about money matters will most assuredly be dishonest about personal affairs. Any love or respect must have as its foundation truth and faith and belief in that person. Those are three things which, if lost, mean the end of the marriage. Most of the things that do not exist, believe me, love does not exist.

Suspicion is usually brought about, in personal affairs especially, through jealousy. There are innumerable cases where a wife is regarded with suspicion by her husband because of her jealousy, but merely because his jealous mind has misconstrued a perfectly legitimate and innocent incident.

And many husbands and wives, because they do love each other so much, close their eyes blindly to things that are too plainly before them to be mistaken. And it is a matter of conscience which is the right way. One person will say it is better to be too suspicious than not suspicious enough. That the fellow who closes his eyes is a sap of the first water.

I have a letter from a woman today who was one to blind herself to things, but now, due to a gross and unmistakable mark of dishonesty, has decided to make the break:

Dear Miss Lee—I have been married twenty-four years and have a daughter 22. My father was quite a wealthy man and my brother and I inherited a good money following his death. He had set aside an amount of money for my daughter, sufficient to send her through college, to go to her when she was in high school. Most of his wealth was in property, but I had a nice income of money every month.

My husband has never been much of a success in the business world. I let him up in a business of his own once, and after investing a large sum of money in it, it failed. In the meantime, he has worked here and there, not making very much at anything. We have never gotten along very well, and in justice to the other fellow, it may have been because I expected too much. But after our daughter came, I decided I would make the best of things.

After my father's death, we had, of course, a great deal more money than my husband had ever seen in his life. I did not like scenes and positively despised wrangling, so I was a bit too liberal with the income. In the meantime, by the time our daughter had graduated from high school, our ready money was gone and there remained only the property. Taxes had come up so much that it was impossible to raise much from a small daughter, realizing the financial situation (and the marital one also) offered to "loan" her money left by her grandfather for college, to us for a few years. She was young, she said, and could wait for her schooling. In the meantime, she took a position, and has been working ever since. She had saved several hundred dollars toward her schooling, besides buying her own clothes.

Things had been going from bad to worse, as regards my relations with my husband. Finally one day we discovered my husband had forged a check that dissipated the entire amount of money my daughter had saved. That was the last straw. She turned against him bitterly for the first time, and needless to say, I hate him thoroughly. I feel that it would be far worse to continue on through life with him than to leave him. I feel that I have been deceived. What would you advise?

Leave him, of course. I can't often advise that, but the man has through twenty-four years proved himself a no-account and now he has proved himself a crook. You have not stated what the money was taken for or whether he had shown any remorse or given any explanation for his act. There can be nothing to excuse the fact that he took the money from his daughter, who has been so unselfish, but at least there may be an explanation. Don't allow the father of your daughter to sink into the level of a crook. See if you cannot do something to help him straighten out before he leaves. Perhaps, with a promise of giving him a chance to make good, not only because of the money but for the principle of the thing, he might become something for both of you to be proud of.

Millions of Families Depend on Dr. Caldwell's Prescription

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their systems. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and if you will once start using it, you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just

City Bride Will Reside in New York

Miss Elizabeth Frances Richardson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Austin Richardson, 1839 North Pennsylvania street, became the bride of George Toel Lorraine, New York, son of Mrs. George Franklin Lorraine, Des Moines, Ia., at 4 Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents.

The service was read by the Rev. Jean S. Milner, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, before a bay window, backed with palms and ferns to form an improvised altar. In the center a seven-branched candelabra with lighted cathedral candles decorated with white chrysanthemums was placed and on either side was a three-branched candelabra. The house throughout was decorated with roses and chrysanthemums in the pastel shades.

The music string trio provided music before and during the ceremony and for a reception that followed. "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin was used for the procession and "Wedding March" from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" for the recessional.

Attended by Sister Carolyn Richardson, the bride's sister, was her only attendant. She wore a gown of white made with a fitted tulle bodice and long full skirt of point d'esprit with uneven hemline. She carried an arm bouquet of chrysanthemums in shades of pink. John R. Neill, New York, was best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a white broadcloth velvet gown made on straight lines and sleeves, with a rose point lace ruff which belonged to her great-grandmother. Her tulle veil fell from the ruff. She wore a headband of pearls and orange blossoms worn by her mother at her wedding, and carried white chrysanthemums.

At a reception which followed, the bride table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake and lighted blue tapers. Mrs. Richardson received in a French blue broadcloth velvet gown with a shoulder corsage of orchids.

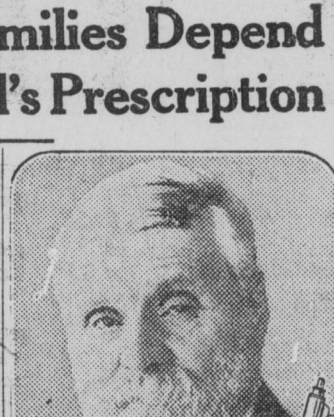

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Brown, Chicago, grandparents of the bride, were out-of-town guests.

Go to New York Home Mr. and Mrs. Lorraine have gone to New York, where they will take up their residence, the bride traveling in a blue ensemble with a fox-trimmed gray coat. She is a graduate of Tudor Hall School for Girls and Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. She has taught music in Indianapolis and New York.

Mr. Lorraine was graduated from Drake university and received his master's degree from the University of Illinois.

Unwrinkled Girdles

When washing girdles and corsets, lay them flat on the scrubbing board and wash with a brush and soapsuds. Do not wring. Just dip into clear water until free from suds and hang on the line. This prevents wrinkling.

Medium Heels

Street shoes are favoring lower heels than summer sandals showed. The medium heel of fair proportions is a great ad sensible favorite. Still in showcraft makes this heel very smart now.

Pocket Scarf

A svelt black felt hat from Paris has little side flaps of galay that step down in modernistic manner over the ears to form a long back line on the neck.
