Disobedient Child Hurts Parent Most

BY MARTHA LEE

One of the most heartbreaking trials of a mother's life is to have a disobedient child. Because disobedience presupposes disrespect, contempt, unwillingness to be disciplined, all those traits that are forerunners of trouble and heartaches.

Each child differs in his reaction to discipline. Some children need only to be told that it is best for them to do certain things, and without question, they obey. Other children must be cajoled, wheedled, fooled, reasoned with. Every case is different, because every child's disposition is different.

I have the following letter today from a baffled mother who has a child she can not understand.

Dear Miss Lee: I have been married thirty years. I married a man who did not like children, and consequently wanted none. We had seven, four girls and three boys. He was unsexually mean to the children and me. I lived with him until our youngest child was 20 months old and then was forced to get away from him. Since that time I have been fighting the battle by myself, with the aid of the older children. I work all day at home and go to a building downtown every night and work until 10:30, with the exception of Sunday night.

My baby boy is now sixteen and a half years old and he just won't work. When he sets a job he can't hold it because he won't obey the boss and of course, gets fired. I can't get him up in the morning. He will not go to the store, carry in coal or wood nor wash my dishes while I am away working. He piles them up for me, and goes out some place and stays so that he gets home just before I do from my work.

I am worried about him. What shall I do? He will not obey me. I have been both father and mother to all of them for over thirteen years. I am broken completely. Life has been so hard without this. I know something must be done, but what? I have been a slave for both my husband and children all these years and I am weary of it all.

C. E. L. H. B.

Things have been awfully bad for you, but you do not mention any trouble with the other six. They must have been brave little soldiers left along all this time, when life must have been very difficult. Your boy needs new methods. Can't you appeal to his manhood, under conditions like these? Surely he must realize what a hard time you have had making a go of things. I should think he would want to do everything in the world to make you happy and ease the burden you have carried since for so many years. If he will not work, why do you not insist that he go to school? If he is not financial help anyway, send him to school, where he will be out of mischief and at the same time bettering himself. Perhaps it is a fact that he is discontented with the work he is able to do that makes it so hard to find a job. I know it is hard, but you must be patient with him. He is just at an age where love and encouragement and understanding can do everything in the world to make him a good man.

CHICAGO SOCIETY GIRL TO MARRY IN SPRING

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Marion Martin Dixon, daughter of George W. Dixon, Chicago, and Stanley Zaring, son of Dr. and Mrs. Elbert Zaring, Greensburg. The wedding will take place in the spring.

Miss Dixon attended Miss Spence's school. She made her debut Nov. 14, 1925, and was presented at the court of St. James last May. She is prominent in various activities of Chicago's younger social set. Mr. Zaring was graduated from Northwestern university in 1923. He served in the navy during the World war.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

BY MARILEN

There are only two things worse than having all your anticipations realized, and a rotten cup of coffee is both of them. I went to see "The Queen's Husband," at the Little Theatre Playhouse on the opening night with the highest possible expectations recalling with unholy glee "The Road to Rome." I confess that I was disappointed. I am remembering that both Anna Louise Griffith and Reg Garstang were to be in the cast. Could you ask for a better movie scene even if you knew what it meant, which I don't? No, you could not.

And it is with real regret and tears in my voice that I confess that I found play production, actors, and audience practically flawless. Which puts me in a difficult position, because when you've said that there isn't an awful lot more to say, and I can't bear to be knocked speechless, which I very rarely am, but was by "The Queen's Husband."

"Mother-in-Law City"

The play is by Robert Sherwood, who had the inspiration to write "The Road to Rome" and to marry Mary Brandon, who is the granddaughter of Mrs. John Judah. So Indianapolis has a sort of mother-in-law claim to him. It is a take-off on Queen Marie and her difficulties in managing her husband and marrying off her daughter. From the moment that charming Betty Hassler saunters across the stage as Princess Anne until Anna Louise received her last bouquet of roses as a tribute to her remarkable rendition as the indomitable queen, you are all agog.

Whether or not Reg Garstang deserves the wild applause with which the audience greeted him is a matter of much indecision with me. For Reginald trod the boards with a sure step and an astounding ease for no other reason than that he was playing and enjoying his very first part. King Eric VIII is modest, shrewd, shyly humorous, and wholly charming. Just figure it out for yourself.

It is simply amazing to me, and I heard a great many of the audience make the same observation, the amount of talent that was on that stage. All the actors were well cast. Ever the butler, who was the king's buddy because he played checkers with him, was a high light. After the play was over and a period of thunderous approval successfully negotiated and the flowers delivered, I hauled Rod back stage to see what was going on. Annie was trying to make the whole stage from one wing to the other without getting her lace train involved in the furniture and disarranging her interestingly reminiscent headgear, with her arms full of pink roses. Bruz Ruckelshaus was hanging around waiting for the dainty ingenu to appear. Mr. Sommes was glowing. Rosemond Van Camp was going around congratulating everybody. We were all talking at once and everybody was having a grand time.

Attracts Outside Audience

There were a number of prominent out of town folk in the audience. With Will Irwin of Columbus were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ball of Muncie. Mrs. William Pollak of Anderson was with Mrs. Isaac Egan. Other interesting members of the audience were Mrs. Herbert Woolen, Mrs. William Bobbs, Mrs. William Coburn and her daughter, Mrs. George Auerbach; Mrs. Edna Severin with Henry and Rudolph; Mr. and Mrs. Schuyler Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Lieber, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Norvall, Mrs. Ovid Butler, Jameson, Mrs. Edna Martin and her daughter Elise; Mrs. Frank Fishback with Mrs. John Merrill Baker. It was a most appreciative audience and showed its realization of the fact that Mr. Sommes has provided a real oasis in our dramatic desert.

Again?

A day that might have meant so much—and she has to be excused. What a pity there's a woman left who does not know of Midol! One or two tablets in time, and not a twinge of pain throughout the entire period. Or an end to such suffering at any time, five to seven minutes after Midol is taken. Yet this merciful medicine is non-narcotic. Its wonderful results are due to the fact it acts directly on the organs affected; so it's utterly harmless, and it is only common sense to use it. Midol comes in a clever little case of aluminum you can slip in the smallest purse. And the cost of this comfort is fifty cents.*

*Midol's comfort is not confined to any certain days or age. It relieves at any time of life. Its case is felt immediately in cases of nervous headache, backache, cramping, hot flashes and all febrile pain peculiar to women.
