New Device Adopted by
Navy to Safeguard
Its Fliers.

By Times Special
NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—One day last spring a United States navy airplane manned by three experienced fliers took off from Hampton Roads and headed up Chesapeake bay.

Presently, over the water, the roar of the motor became intermittent, then ceased and the plane began a long glide down.

In a few seconds the pilot "panicked" the plane into the bay. No ships were near enough to see the accident. The veteran pilot, Lieutenant Commander T. G. Ellison, and his two companions soon were drowned.

Other than a few splinters of the plane that were washed ashore, no trace of the unfortunate trio and their plane never has been found.

Floating Gear Invented

While those brave men were giving their lives toward the price that man is paying for the conquest of the air, a group of engineers were perfecting for the navy a safety device that enables a pilot to make a forced landing in deep water without undue risk of such fatal accidents.

Sailors call the new invention a "floatation gear," and its adoption by the United States navy as standard equipment on the new bombers now being delivered marks another great step toward safety in flying.

Close co-operation between the engineering staff of the Glenn L. Martin Company and the rubber and fabric experts of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company brought about the invention of the floatation gear which the navy officially has adopted for its new planes.

Lightness, simplicity and unfailing reliability are the salient features of the new invention.

The entire equipment for a large bombing plane weighs less than seventy pounds.

There are no delicate adjustments to get out of order, and if the pilot pulls the control lever the whole operation of inflating the floatation bags becomes rapid and automatic.

Globe Air Route Pondered

By United Press
OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 16.—An air route around the world is seen as a strong possibility in the near future by J. A. Wilson, controller of civil aviation, who recently returned from a stay of two months in the British Isles and Europe.

"Enormous developments in inter-empire communication may be expected within the next few years," Wilson said. "While efforts so far have been to some extent concentrated on flights to India and Africa, the eyes of British fliers are turning towards Canada."

The R-100 and R-101 shortly will be ready for their trial trips and in the early spring would be ready for trans-Atlantic trips to Montreal.

The congress, he said, has promised every assistance for the development of aviation through scientific and adequate lighting of landing fields, air route markers, beacons and for planes themselves. Plane lights, it was said, would make practicable safe landings on unlighted fields.

By Times Special
SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 16.—Police Chief James J. Hlatt warns aviators to cease the practice of flying low over Cartier field where large crowds attended University of Notre Dame football games. KICK ON VOTE PAY

Election Board Objects to Canvassers' Wages.

Objections to the pay requests filed by men who operated the county canvassing board for compilation of votes in the recent election, was voiced today by election commissioners.

Forty men, who worked a maximum of sixty-eight hours and who seek $1 an hour for their services, will be paid, County Clerk George O. Hutsell said.

But three others who acted as supervisors at the counting and who worked about the same length of time, will not be paid the $350 and $300 they seek, he said. James W. Lamkin, titled supervisor, seeks $350 and H. E. Wilson and George K. Vestal want $300.

In the primary these three men worked about eighty-nine hours and Lamkin asked for $350 and the other two placed claims for $300. Lamkin was sliced to $300 and the others were paid $250.

REGULATION CHRISTMAS CARDS URGED BY NEW

Postmaster General Says Irregular
Sizes Slow Up Mail Delivery.

By Times Special
WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—Postmaster General New today issued an appeal to the public to avoid using small or irregular sized Christmas greeting cards this year, stating that the unusual sizes cause much extra work and difficulty in handling on the part of postoffice workers.

Poster notices have been sent to all postoffices and branches throughout the country, urging that only standard sizes cards and envelopes be used, and that they be mailed early.

According to the postmaster general's office, the smaller cards and envelopes cannot be run through the cancelling machines which makes it necessary to void each stamp by hand. This not only wastes time, but results in delivery delays, the postal officials state.
