

Younger Generation Too Often Judged by Wild Escapades of Exceptions

SMALL wonder it is that the old raise their hands heavenward and cry "What's the world coming to?" when they read and see and hear some of the death defying things some of the younger generation does. I still contend these fledglings are much better balanced, much more sensible, much less likely to walk around with heads in the clouds as a group. They are grim realists for the most part.

Those who have benefited by their education, their advantages, their reading and travels are pretty level headed. But there are the radicals, and, of course, the radicals are a group. And the older folk see these, hear them and read about them, and wall: "What's the world coming to?"

Without Sacrament Take, for instance, this news item. A young couple entered a marathon dance (more's the pity). They danced together for twelve days, and figured if they could stand each other for so long a time they surely must be soul mates. They decided, on the strength of that, to marry! But after all-it was a marathon and I mean even marriage simply must not interfere with the dance, so they got some judge or other to come up and read the service, as they performed a couple of fancy steps for the crowd.

A jazz wedding, with a dancing judge. "Yes Sir, She's My Baby" for the professional and "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" for the recreational! Now I ask you, can marriage be taken seriously under such conditions? Can there be anything sacramental about a thing like that?

The 16-year-old boy who takes his father's car out, thinks he has an airplane and tries to climb a tree is the youngster who gets the publicity, not the thousands of steady, serious minded youngsters, who are working and playing and staying out of the limelight. And yet, because of this one, the other thousand are looked upon as devils on wheels; incapable of doing anything constructive in the world.

Condemned by Exception This one boy is not the average. He is not the example. He is the exception. And the other youngsters deserve a fair break from the older generation until proved on a par with the high fliers. This idea of parents pulling in the reins because of the follies of Mr. Joe Cabbage's son Joe is the bunk. Treat your youngsters like you would want to be treated. Trust them until they have proved themselves unworthy of that trust.

Here is a letter from a boy who is, if not suffering, at least being annoyed by the fact that his father has been reading too much about the younger generation, and taking it seriously:

"Dear Miss Lee: I don't imagine you get letters from boys very often, but I just have to pop off and have an idea that your column might be a good place to do the popping.

I am 17 years old. I have always considered myself pretty level headed, haven't gotten into any scrapes, always stood fairly high in my classes at school and have never, in my humble opinion, done anything to make my father worry about.

But my dad has been taking all this blarney about the younger generation pretty serious. Every time I want to do something he will refuse, saying, didn't I see by the paper where so and so was killed, maimed or laid up for a couple of weeks while on a joy ride? And he doesn't know what the world's coming to. When he was a boy there were no such notions flying around. Boys were content to read and study and stay home.

All of which is very true. I am, too, but I like to go out once in a while. When I do go out I must come in and show him the clock when I return, and let him smell my breath so that he can make sure I have not been smoking or drinking. Honest, Miss Lee, if I was a fellow who wanted to do those things this sort of treatment would have driven me to it. Don't you think it pretty rotten of parents to act that way just because of the way a couple of fellows act?

SEVENTEEN. I think I have answered most of your questions in the first part of my article. Seventeen. I agree with you, that a man is innocent until he is proved guilty. Why should you be denied things, suspected and watched until you have shown you need these precautionary movements? Have a talk with your father and tell him the things you have told me.

EXAMPLES OF LACE'S EFFECTIVENESS

An unusual lace overcoat and cuffs of hand-thread lace embellish the midnight blue velvet frock, left, plaided in gold and green. Quaint and youthful is the cape collar and cuff frills of net lace on the black velvet dress, center. Point Venice adds its rich cafe au lait touch to the collar, cuffs and pointed overskirt of a dressy daytime costume shown at the right.

Epworth League Chapter Sets Date for Institute

The Edwin Ray chapter of the Epworth League will conduct an institute at Edwin Ray M. E. church, Woodlawn avenue and Laurel street, Nov. 19 to 25 inclusive.

It is the first time in the history of the league that a local chapter has attempted an institute. Walter C. Rothermel, chairman, stated today.

Active People want and need sugar The "Fuel of Preference" in the body

AN EMINENT food authority recently stated that any person who has a very active body is likely to be always on the edge of the sugar reserve in his body (glycogen). "That is why," he said, "the soldier and athlete wants and needs sugar. That is why the active child wants and needs sugar." He went on to explain that sugar is the fuel of preference in the body, that sugar can be more easily and quickly converted into energy than any other food. He emphasized the fact that sugar should form a part of the regular diet of every family and that any reducing diet, as well as any other diet, should contain sugar.

The best way for sugar to be eaten is as a flavor of other foods. In that way, it serves the double purpose of furnishing energy to the body and also of adding appetizing delight to other healthful foods. Sugar added to healthful grain cereals makes them welcome and enjoyable to growing children. Think of how many health-giving fruits are objectionable to the taste without sugar. Scientists tell us that we need the daily roughage of salads as well as cooked fruits and vegetables. Any good cook knows that adding sugar makes all of these welcome and pleasant to the palate. In addition to being the best and cheapest fuel for the body, sugar is nature's perfect flavor. It makes nearly all other foods more enjoyable. For health and enjoyment, there is no substitute for sugar. The Sugar Institute.
