

Wife of New Lawmaker From Indiana Well Versed in Washington Social Life

"Mrs. Louis Ludlow, wife of the representative-elect from the Seventh Indiana district," will supplant the introduction, "Mrs. Ludlow, wife of the well-known correspondent," when the Ludlows return to Washington, D. C., next week. Mrs. Ludlow, a newspaper woman herself, has watched social life whirl during the twenty-seven years her husband has eyed representatives and United States senators from the capitol's press galleries.

"The most delightful feature of it all," said Mrs. Ludlow today, "is the charming acquaintances one makes with persons, not only from all parts of the United States, but from foreign countries as well."

Mrs. Ludlow thoroughly enjoys the capitol's social life, but through the eyes of a former newspaper society editor, it loses no little of its glamor. Mrs. Ludlow was society editor of the old Indianapolis Sentinel when Mr. Ludlow, an ambitious reporter, was a member of its staff. Their acquaintance ripened into romance and when Mr. Ludlow went to Washington as the Sentinel's correspondent in 1901, he deprived the Sentinel of the services of its society writer.

"Louis had the Washington bee in his bonnet as long as I can remember," said Mrs. Ludlow.

"It offered a wider field for his reportorial efforts, he realized, and politics and government were his hobbies."

But social functions were subordinated to family interests in the Ludlow home. They have three married daughters, two residing in Washington and the third in Cleveland, O., and one son, Louis Jr., 21, now at George Washington university.

"While the family must come first in woman's interests," said Mrs. Ludlow, "woman owes it to herself, her family and her country to maintain an active interest in politics."

"This is an obligation going hand in hand with her growing independence and widening opportunities and responsibilities."

"I'm not unaware of certain ways this independence finds expression," said Mrs. Ludlow smiling, as she glanced across the lobby of the Spink Arms hotel to a young woman casually inhaling a cigaret.

"I should not like to think that my girls were smoking, but that's their affair after all. And I am not one of those who think the younger set is 'going to the dogs.' They are intensely alive, self-reliant. I should have enjoyed their freedom, I think."

"Why, I recall that mother would not permit me to use our sewing machine when I was a girl. She was afraid I might break the needle. You may be sure I remedied that when I had girls of my own."

NOTE: The Times will give $1 for each recipe submitted by a reader, judged of sufficient merit, to be printed in this column. One recipe is printed daily except Friday, when twelve are given. Address: Recipe Editor of The Times. Prizes will be mailed to winners.

Orange Cookie

One cupful sugar, 3 eggs,  $\frac{3}{4}$  cupful butter,  $\frac{1}{4}$  cupful flour, grated rind of 2 lemons, 2 oranges, baking powder.

Cream butter and sugar, add grated yellow rind, well beaten eggs, flour and baking powder; blend well, chill, roll thin using sugar instead of flour on board; dredge with sugar, cut with small fancy cutter; bake a delicate color in moderate oven.

Rescued for the Roll Call

YESTERDAY's ugly little cold was "rubbed away" last night. She's safe from the sharp misery of grip or bronchitis that so often starts with "just a cold." Now she won't miss school after all.

Thanks to this Modern
Vaporizing Ointment

She escaped, too, the "dosing" that might have upset her digestion. And all because, last night, at bedtime, Mother rubbed her throat and chest with Vicks.

Like a gentle but effective poultice, this modern vaporizing ointment began to "draw out" all the tightness and pain. At the same time, warmed by her body, it gave off healing vapors that she breathed in to clear her stuffed-up nose and throat.

She quickly felt asleep, but Vicks' double action went on for hours and, by morning, the worst of her cold was over.

Mother checks her own colds the same quick way.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

BY MARILYN

My dears, we are facing a winter of stark intellectuality! We'll all just have to gird up our loins and be brave about it, because here is what we're about to be exposed to:

First the Orchard school is bringing some outstanding lecturers here this winter for a series of Sunday lectures, talks at the Armory on Pennsylvania street.

Sunday brought Lowell Thomas, the very attractive young author of "With Lawrence in Arabia" and "Beyond Khyber Pass," talking on "Into Forbidden Afghanistan." He has a small mustache, a Princeton smile, and is described as a "gentle-mannered, adventurous and world-wise bond." Can you bear it? Mrs. Ovid Butler Jameson entertained Mr. Thomas at dinner before the lecture.

The committee having these lectures in charge has been working so hard on the series that members met in a fainting condition the other day at the Propylaeum for lunch to report progress. Mrs. Willis Gatch, Mrs. Fred Bates Johnson, Mrs. Pierre Goodrich, Mrs. Leo Burnett and Mrs. G. H. A. Clowes all had sick headaches and as a first course of their luncheon passed around some aspirin tablets. The rest of the committee were all sick in bed.

Three More Booked

Later in the same series comes Count Von Luckner, whom Fred Ayres has asked to entertain. And in January there is Roy Chapman Andrews, who did something in a big way about dinosaur eggs—was it discover them? And last of all—the voice that's thrilled a million hearts—the voice you love to hear with apologies to Woodbury's soap—Graham McNamee!

Now if we survive that without the use of splints and aspirin, we still have the splendid lectures at the Jewish Forum to combat, and now Mrs. Joseph Minor, president of Tudor Hall Alumnae, tells me that Tudor Hall is bringing Edna St. Vincent Millay here Dec. 6, and Louis Untermeyer later.

Edna St. Vincent Millay was a senior when I was a freshman at Vassar and her poetry always has just weakened my hold on life. Her last dainty slim book of poetry, why are they always dainty slim books of poetry?—"The Buck in the Snow," is a dream of a thing.

Isn't the prospect alarming? So elevating and high in the brow. At the end of the winter I bet I'll either be manipulating the English language like Vernon Hahn, or else pull an Elizabeth Richardson on the town and cooly get myself matrimonially involved over the week-end.

Breaks Engagement, but Weds
Didn't that knock you for a loop? I was calmly having lunch at Ayres when up came Elisabeth looking like a million dollars and said she, "Oh my dear, I'm so sorry! I can't have tea with you tomorrow afternoon after all. I have another engagement at 4 o'clock. In fact, I'm getting married!"

"Well, I was just so upset I forgot to finish my caramel cake and whipped cream, the very fondest thing I'm of. Greater excitement had no man than giving without his caramel cake for his brother. Consider that statement all rewritten and feminized. I'm getting so careless about my genders. And his name is George Tol Lorraine and they are going to live in New York. Isn't it exciting? I wish everybody would get married that way. I think it's lot more thrilling than all the customary fanfare and furor. Don't you think so, or don't you?"

Miss Adams Is Bride in Church Rite

Miss Mary Anne Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Elder Adams, 4145 Washington boulevard, became the bride of William Hiram Macomber, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert H. Macomber, Kendallville, at the First Baptist church at 8:30 Saturday evening. The altar was banked with Sybodium ferns, with a huge bouquet of white chrysanthemums and a fourteen-branch candelabra in the center. Tall standards filled with white chrysanthemums and low jars of the flowers and seven-branch candelabra flanked either side of the altar. The entire church was candle lit, with tall tapers tied with white pompon chrysanthemums on alternate pews. At the back of the church was a tall screen of evergreen trees, with an arch formation for entrance of the bride party. Dr. Frederick E. Taylor, pastor of the church, read the service.

While guests were being seated by Harry and Edmond Park, Kendallville; Paul Ware, Chicago, and Jerry Cadick, ushers, Paul Matthews, organist, played a program of bridal airs. The wedding party entered to "The Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin and during the ceremony Mr. Matthews played "Lieberstraum."

Sister Leads Attendants

Attendants walked single, led by Miss Janet Adams, sister of the bride, who was maid of honor. She wore a gown of shaded pink tulle over silver lace and pink satin. The bridesmaids, Misses Elizabeth Bowerlin, Ft. Wayne; Evelyn Barnes; Elizabeth Coulter, Frankfort, and Martha Walker, Chicago, wore gowns fashioned alike with satin bodices and ruffled tulle skirts. Hugs bows on the hip, had streamers touching the floor. Misses Bowerlin and Barnes wore rose petals. Jack Macomber, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

Bride in Ivory Satin

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore an ivory satin gown with a long fitted bodice and full skirt formed in a train. Her ivory tulle veil was made cap shape with a band of lace across the back. A cluster of orange blossoms caught the veil at the left side. She wore ivory slippers and carried a shower bouquet of white roses, valley lilies and white orchids.

Following the ceremony, a small reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The house was decorated throughout with white chrysanthemums. The bridal table was arranged with a wedding cake on a mound of roses for the centerpiece, and lighted with white tapers. Mrs. Adams wore a gown of poudre blue crepe embroidered in pink, silver and gold, with a shoulder corsage of pink roses. Mrs. Macomber wore transparent velvet with a shoulder corsage of orchids.

Travel in South

Mr. and Mrs. Macomber are on a motor trip through the south and will be at home in Kendallville. The bride was graduated from Tudor hall and Smith college. Mr. Macomber is a graduate of Cornell university and a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. George P. Haywood Jr., Mrs. George P. Haywood Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Haywood and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Erisman, Lafayette; Mrs. Frank Park, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. McCray and daughter, Sarah McCray; Mesdames H. I. Park, Donald Campbell and J. C. Stahl, Kendallville; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Morrison, Ft. Worth, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Bowerlin and Miss Susan Bowerlin; Miss Margaret Heine, Messrs. Fritz Perfelt, Rush McClure, Alfred Randell and Thomas Wolfram, Ft. Wayne.

A famous cook gives his recipe

A MAN, famous among his friends for his fine cooking, was asked the secret of his delicious boiled ham. He gave this simple recipe: Put a cupful of sugar in the water that boils an average size ham. Also one-half cup of vinegar. Try this and see how much it improves the taste and flavor of the ham.

Every good cook knows that there is no substitute for sugar in improving the enjoyment of other foods. Whether in preparing fresh vegetables, fruits or meats, sugar is the secret of successful cookery.

Sweetness is nature's perfect flavor. It is also the cheapest nutriment that you can buy.

Health comes from eating good foods, flavored to please the taste. Beware of extreme reducing diets. They are dangerous. Eminent medical authorities warn us that permanent injury often results from starvation diets.

Be sure that you and your children are properly nourished. Eat enough of varied foods, sweetened for enjoyment. The Sugar Institute.

Couple Likes Latest Plan of Marriage

BY MARTHA LEE

Next to the peace pact and the recent election, there is nothing more people talk about more consistently than companionate marriage. Believe it or not. Every place you go some one pops out with a new and original interpretation of Judge Lindsey's cure for wedded ailments.

Companionate marriage is not really a twentieth century thought. It is as old as philanthropy. It has been dressed in all sorts of phrasing, called by other names in other centuries and all that sort of thing. But, it was all sub rosa until we, who love nothing better than airing ideas, dragged it out of oblivion, gave it the name of "companionate marriage" and loosed it on a world where many persons look for some good solution by which they can have their cake and eat it.

It is not that I turn up my nose at new ideas. I don't. I think they are great. It shows that persons are thinking things out and trying solutions for old ills. But I mean after all marriage isn't such an aggravating ailment as some folk would like to have us think.

In the first place, let's get this straight. I am old-fashioned enough to believe that somewhere, tucked away in the mind of a man or woman who marries is the thought that that mate will be satisfactory as the mother or father of children. There may not even be a consciousness that such a thought exists. And in order that these children may have the advantages of birth and home life, there must be a legal contract.

I have heard it argued that a man who will take care of his children will do it just as conscientiously without being forced as he will through the emphasis of the marriage contract. True enough, but how about the stability of the home, the certainty that these children will have the comfortable, secure feeling that the home is a permanent institution, at least in that one family. The companionate marriage idea is all right for the contracting parties, but how about the children?

Here are some ideas from a reader about companionate marriage:

"Dear Miss Lee:—I am a woman thirty-eight and a woman thirty wish to marry on companionate terms. They have both been unwedded in the past. They are both very much in love, but they hesitate to marry the old fashion way because of their past experiences with marriage of that sort. Is companionate marriage legal in Indiana? If so, who performs such ceremonies? Does one obtain an ordinary marriage license? And in the event of a divorce, is there actually a legal separation or is there just a declaration that the couple no longer care to live as man and wife?"

In my opinion companionate marriage is just a common law arrangement. Is that correct? From what I can learn of this kind of alliance, I believe it is the coming solution to the fast increasing marital problems. Some say a great many would take advantage of such loose laws of marriage, but could it be any worse than the way conditions exist now? We both feel that people marry because they are selfish and wish to bind their partners so he or she can not escape, not because they are so strong for morality.

Supper Meeting
The regular meeting of the Girls' Friendly Society of America will be held Tuesday evening in the parish house. Supper will be served at 6. Plans are being made for the annual fair and dinner to be held in the parish house, Dec. 4.
