STORM KILLS 85; PROPERTY LOSS IS HUGE

Western Europe Is Lashed by Most Furious Gale in 50 Years.

SOUND NEW WARNINGS

Trail of Death Is Blazed Through Great Britain and France.

By United Press London, Nov. 19.—At least eighty-five and possibly more than 100 persons have been killed in the furious storm that has swept the British Isles and western Europe since last Thursday, according to the latest figures available today.

Hundreds have been injured and damaged running into the millions was suffered.

The storm was described by meteorologists as one of the worst general storms in history and a warning was broadcast that a renewal of the heavy gales and rains were imminent over the British Isles and English channel.

French Coast Lashed

By United Press PARIS, Nov. 19.—The aftermath of the storm which has spread a trail of death and destruction in England and Europe for the last four days lashed the French coast Sunday. It seemed certain that the death toll would reach 100.

High gales drove damaged shipping into Cherbourg harbor and vessels which normally would make eighteen knots an hour were able to make only five.

The death list grew as reports continued to pour in today. England had twenty-five deaths, with the possibility of sixteen more in the missing crews of the steamer Eltham and schooner Mary Ann, wrecked Saturday.

Lifeboats had succeeded in rescuing only one person from the Mary Ann. It was thought impossible that the others could be alive.

France had twelve deaths, twelve lost their lives off the Holland coast and many others were reported from isolated towns.

A dispatch from Amsterdam told of a small sailing vessel caught in the storm and wrecked off Terschelling island, drowning the captain, his wife and ten children. Captains of vessels arriving at Dutch ports described the terrific seas encountered in the gale.

Official reports from London said the storm was the most severe in fifty years of weather bureau history.

From the Isere valley in France, came word that this section was flooded anew, its rivers overflowing and doing extensive damage, running into the millions, as parts of Avignon and Grenoble became inundated.

Uplift Craze Hits Kennels; Now Dogs Will Go to College

BY HORTENSE SAUNDERS

NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—"Going to the dogs" may have a different meaning if the canines of the country take to the uplift and higher education that is being planned for them.

Leading the dogs to their golden age is Fellow, that superbly beautiful gentleman and scholar of the dog world who is helping to raise a Fellow fund. This will be used in establishing research laboratories in which the dog's life may be studied by competent animal psychologists.

Professor C. J. Warden, director of the animal laboratory at Columbia university is chairman of the Fellow fund committee, and Dr. J. B. Watson, famed behaviorist psychologist, is treasurer.

Fellow is the recognized leader of the dog intelligentsia—probably the mental giant of his race. Only 6 years old, he has been going to Columbia university for two years, has been examined by psychologists, and pronounced the wonder animal of the world.

It is no sense a trick dog or a stunt performer, Fellow is a deep thinker. It is declared that he can think, concentrate and obey implicitly. The words he understands number almost 400—only slightly less than the number used by the average human being in an average conversation.

His coat, with the colors you find in a cross fox fur, is soft and gleaming, and the lines of his body are lithe and graceful.

Fellow is a German shepherd dog, and was sired by a police dog descended from a long line of prize winners. He is the father of forty pups, but none of them has anything like Fellow's mentality.

As a wage earner, Fellow is no slouch. He made $10,000 in three months last year giving demonstrations of his work.

Fellow is weighed every day and stays around 70 pounds. His temperature, taken daily, is about a degree lower than that of the average dog, due possibly to the tranquility of his life.

Fellow eats only the choicest of viands, with a preference for breast of veal. He lies out flat in his bed like a human, instead of curled up like a dog, and he suffers from nightmares—due, it is said, to his high mental tension.

PUPIL SLAIN, SCHOOL BOOZE QUIZ ORDERED

Chicago Cleanup Started, to Halt Liquor Sales to Students.

By United Press CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Three investigations were launched today into the death of William Adomatis, 18-year-old student, shot to death Sunday by Anthony Juskus, proprietor of an ice cream parlor.

The youth was killed in the refreshment parlor, which is said to be a liquor resort.

Coroner Oscar Wolff will start his investigation into the killing today. He said he had been informed that merchants in the neighborhood have been selling liquor to school children.

William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, opened an inquiry today by calling a conference with police officials to lay plans to put the lid on bootlegging in the vicinity of city schools.

William R. Russel, commissioner of police, has ordered each police district to make a survey of the schools. Steps will be taken to close all places where juvenile delinquency is found. Russel said.

Juskus Sunday admitted killing young Adomatis. He said the youth, with several others, was playing cards in the back room of the ice cream parlor. Juskus said he played cards with the youth on won $6.

"Then" Juskus said, "I asked if they wanted a drink. They all ordered sodas. When I asked them to pay, Adomatis threw a glass at me and tried to beat me. I got my gun and shot him. I had to do it if I wanted to save myself."

After the shooting, Juskus tossed his revolver out of the rear door. When police arrived he denied the killing, but later admitted it.

John Adomatis, father of the slain boy, met Juskus at the police station and attempted to attack him. He was restrained by several policemen.

MUNCIE MAN INJURED IN MICHIGAN BUS CRASH

Seven Hurt in Collision When Priest's Car Hits Truck.

PAWPAW, Mich., Nov. 19.—One woman was near death today and six others were in a critical condition at a Kalamazoo hospital as the result of a Chicago-to-Detroit bus, loaded with thirty-five passengers, colliding with an automobile driven by the Rev. Father Julian Bonna, Pawpaw.

The bus, traveling at a high rate of speed, cut around an automobile and collided with a machine driven by the priest.

Mrs. Pearl Merrick of Augusta, Mich., suffered a fractured skull and may die. Included among others seriously injured were:

Julian N. Tubbets, Madison, Wis.; Alva Johnson, Muncie, Ind.; Wilson Dodge, U. S. M. C. navy yards, Philadelphia, and Father Bonna.

The bus, traveling at a high rate of speed, cut around an automobile and collided with a machine driven by the priest.

Butler university students and faculty members were to argue advantages of the proposal with protesting property owners before the park board in city council chamber this afternoon.

The remonstrance filed against the petition points out that Meridian street already is overcrowded with traffic; motor buses would ruin the new paving and destroy attractiveness of the street; and lives of school children would be endangered.

Heeding the list of remonstrants are the heads of five schools along Meridian street or adjacent to it: Sister Hildegarde, Mother Superior, St. Agnes academy, Brother William, head of Cathedral high school; Charles M. Miller, superintendent Indianapolis public schools; Nell Farrar, superintendent of Tudor hall, and Mary S. Ray, principal Frank W. Wood.

LECTURES ON INDIA

Safety Depends on England, Says Lowell Thomas.

A word picture of India overrun by the hordes of Soviet Russia or by the savage Afghans if the British cease to guard Khyber Pass was painted by Lowell Thomas, globe trotter, in a lecture on "Forbidden Afghanistan," at the Armory Sunday afternoon under the auspices of Orchard school.

"India is not one race, but a hundred, and any lessening of the British rule would bring in the Afghans or the Russians, who look with longing eyes over the mountain ranges into British India," said Thomas.

METEOR SHOWER FORECASTS NIGHT OF FIRE FOR WORLD IN FIVE YEARS

BY HILLIER KREIGBAUM
United Press Staff Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—Brilliant specks in the sky last week that marked the earth's passage through the path of the Leonid meteors, indicate that the earth probably will witness a "night of fire" in 1932 or 1933, Professor Charles P. Olivier said today.

Professor Olivier observed the meteors to see if there was an increase over last year which would indicate that the Leonids were approaching a maximum within five years.

He said that his observations had led him to believe that the night of Nov. 12, 1933, would be duplicated. On that night the sky was ablaze with meteors. Many thought the earth was coming to an end. More than 25,000 meteors were seen by a single observer in Europe.

The professor is president of the American Meteor Society and a member of the University of Pennsylvania faculty at the Flower observatory at Upper Darby.

DATA on the meteors collected all over the United States and Canada by meteor observers will be sent to the president of the society, who will tabulate it in an effort to give complete data to astronomers who will calculate the mathematics of the 1932 or 1933 display.

That will give scientists the exact data on which to predict approximately how the earth will react to the meteors then.

The meteors which always appear in the middle of November, ride out of the constellation of Leo. They crash into the earth's atmosphere at an estimated speed of forty-four miles a second, the professor said.

Because of their speed, the meteors are "burned out" before they possibly could reach the earth, Professor Olivier explained. He said that once in a while they become fire-balls, meteors that reach within thirty to forty miles of the earth and have the brilliance of a pale moon on a clear summer night.

The others are burned to nothing in the rare gases more than eighty miles above the earth's surface.

THE Leonids have a brother and sister relationship with Tempel's comet," the professor explained. "They probably both had a common parent. They both have a circuit around the sun of thirty-three years."

Possibility that the Leonids might never again enter the earth's atmosphere in large groups was seen after the planet Jupiter, the sky monarch, "pulled" the meteors out of their course in 1899, the year that the earth would have passed through the thickest portion of the meteors.

This year's display indicated that other forces had righted the influences of Jupiter and the Leonids were back in their normal course of 1833.

TURKS TO BE BIG AND JUICY, COST NO MORE

News Out of Commission Row Is Sweet Music to Feast Buyers.

SHIPMENTS ARE SLOW

Chinchilla Rabbits Make Appearance on Scene as Delicacies.

By United Press CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—More and better turkeys for the nation's feast table this Thanksgiving were forecast today in reports to commission houses here from the plains states, where the gobbling of doomed fowl has become music to the natives.

The Thanksgiving turkey won't cost any more this year than it did in 1927—between $5 and 60 cents a pound—but thanks to Uncle Sam, it will be a much nicer turkey.

The commission men don't take credit for that. The government imposed restrictions on the Texas crop, permitting only the very best fowl to leave the state, and the government gets the glory.

Otherwise this promises to be a fairly normal Thanksgiving.

Weather Slows 'Em Up

Warm weather has slowed up shipment of turkeys. Birds "on the hoof" are coming in large numbers now and "off hoof" turkeys will begin arriving Nov. 24. They should be in the hands of retailers a week from tomorrow.

Feeding conditions this autumn have been better than usual and that as well as the government curtailment of low-grade shipments will add to the quality of the meat next week.

Fewer turkeys come from Texas now than from other parts of the country. Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa will come into their own as big turkey-raising states.

Geese also are plentiful this year, as are ducks, guineas, Alaskan reindeer, chinchilla rabbits, English venison, bear meat and capon.

Rabbits Are Delicacy

The commission men hope all won't feel bound to serve turkey, as large quantities of other good foods are going to be on sale, too.

Chinchilla rabbits, which sell for 50 and 60 cents a pound, are considered a delicacy. They are milk-fed and although raised for their fur, their meat is as tender as that of a chicken.

English venison will advance to $1 a pound and bear meat to 75 cents about forty-eight hours before Thanksgiving.

Other ingredients and accessories of seasonal feasting—except liquors, which will be discussed in another dispatch at a later date—are unchanged over last year to cheaper.

Enough for Feast

Maurice Aaron, who has been catering to the American appetite for feathered foods for the last forty-three years, estimated that a family of five could stuff itself to the bursting point at a meal outside the cost of $8. Here are the menu and costs as Aaron drew them up:

Turkey (eight-pounder, allowing enough for two days of hash) ..... $4.50

Potatoes, sweet and Irish ..... 25

Celery ..... 25

Cranberries for sauce ..... 30

Nuts ..... 50

Pumpkin for pies ..... 35

Coffee, soup, etc. ..... 1.0
