

Butler Ends Season With Cleats Flying

Hinchman, Cavesie, Royse and Others Give Tufts Severe Trouncing.

BULLDOGS IN RARE FORM

Line Holds and Backs Go 'Many Places.'

BY DICK MILLER

Tufts football squad, hailed as one of the strong elevens of the east, was en route back home to Medford, Mass., today, convinced they had encouraged an entirely superior foe in Butler university gridironers, who defeated them 26 to 3 here Thursday. The Bulldogs ran rough shod over the easterners at the Butler stadium in the intersectional scrap. At no time did Tufts players display enough power to lead the 7,000 spectators to believe they might defeat Potsy Clark's aggregation.

Using for the first time a shift that was built along military lines, the Bulldogs began a march shortly after the first whistle that was momentarily stopped only when the new shift drew penalties or the eastern line rose for a brief stand only to crumble on the next play or two.

Hinchman Scores

Cavesie, the big Butler half back, who warmed the bench most of the year because of a leg injury, was in the fray and started the ball rolling goalward with a twenty-five-yard dash. Hinchman and Royse added dashes that took the oval to within a foot of the goal and three line crashes failed, but Hinchman dove over and Royse missed the kick for extra point.

The team exchanged punts and then Butler started another parade and when Hinchman dashed twenty-yards he got over the line for another touchdown. Royse kicked the extra point.

Ellis Drop Kicks

After battling even for most of the second quarter the eastern team showed a flash of strength after they recovered a Butler fumble on the six-yard line, but they were not sure they could carry the ball over on the fourth down and Ellis dropped back and booted a pretty drop kick over the cross bar. The half ended 13 to 3.

In the second half Butler intercepted several Tuft forward passes.

Light for End

By NEA Service

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Oscar Gerth, who played a regular end position with the Catholic university team here, will not be mentioned on any All-American squads, but he claims one distinction—he was the lightest varsity end on any big team in the country this year.

Gerth, who comes from Philadelphia, weighs only 138 pounds in his equipment, but he was one of the best blockers and chargers on the 1920 team.

and after one of these Hinchman smashed off a couple of long runs and Royse made a touchdown. He missed the kick.

The pride this section always has held in the brand of football played along the Atlantic seaboard, received a severe jolt Thursday when a white-clad team from Oregon outclassed the New York university eleven, 23 to 12.

Should army fall before the attack of Leland Stanford on the same field Saturday, any respect the far west may have held for eastern football will have waned. A Stanford victory might even cause eastern fans to wonder if they were not a bit too proud of football as they knew it.

The New York team which lost to Oregon Thursday was a tired one, played a drive that consisted of five first downs with Ellis doing the brunt of the off-tackle running, but time was too short and just before the final whistle Butler intercepted a pass and the game was over.

The Butler starting line, end to end, was impregnable and the back field was very effective, especially in interference work. After watching the final drive of the invading line one is apt to believe it was the superior strength of the Butler regulars instead of the weakness of the Tuft eleven that brought victory to Indianapolis. Butler has several times assumed a faltered repeatedly. Aside from one or two flashes when he evaded Oregon tacklers to pile up substantial yardage, he seemed to be dogged by the same listlessness that marred the play of his teammates.

At the outset New York looked like the team that swept the east. Only a few minutes after the start of the game Strong broke loose for a long run which placed the ball near scoring position. A few plays later Beryl Follett, Violet full back, crashed over for the first touchdown. Strong added the point.

Then the visitors took the situation into their own hands and the cheerfulness of the Violet fans abated. Only a few minutes elapsed in the second quarter before Sherman smashed through to the goal from the two-yard line for the first Oregon score. A second touchdown was scored with dispatch, Gilmore carrying the ball from the six-yard marker.

Before the half ended the Aggies had counted a third, McKalp taking a pass from Gilmore behind his own goal. Maple added an extra point to this one.

The fourth Oregon touchdown came in the third quarter with Hughes scoring. This brought the

Well, Well, Well! Big Town Slickers Poked on Chin by Oregon Farmers

Proud New York 'U' Eleven Upset and Outclassed by Aggies; Eastern Boys Appear Worn.

By United Press

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The reputation of eastern football as far as gridiron fans of the far west are concerned, lies in the hands of the army.

The pride this section always has held in the brand of football played along the Atlantic seaboard, received a severe jolt Thursday when a white-clad team from Oregon outclassed the New York university eleven, 23 to 12.

Should army fall before the attack of Leland Stanford on the same field Saturday, any respect the far west may have held for eastern football will have waned. A Stanford victory might even cause eastern fans to wonder if they were not a bit too proud of football as they knew it.

The New York team which lost to Oregon Thursday was a tired one, played a drive that consisted of five first downs with Ellis doing the brunt of the off-tackle running, but time was too short and just before the final whistle Butler intercepted a pass and the game was over.

The Butler starting line, end to end, was impregnable and the back field was very effective, especially in interference work. After watching the final drive of the invading line one is apt to believe it was the superior strength of the Butler regulars instead of the weakness of the Tuft eleven that brought victory to Indianapolis. Butler has several times assumed a faltered repeatedly. Aside from one or two flashes when he evaded Oregon tacklers to pile up substantial yardage, he seemed to be dogged by the same listlessness that marred the play of his teammates.

At the outset New York looked like the team that swept the east. Only a few minutes after the start of the game Strong broke loose for a long run which placed the ball near scoring position. A few plays later Beryl Follett, Violet full back, crashed over for the first touchdown. Strong added the point.

Then the visitors took the situation into their own hands and the cheerfulness of the Violet fans abated. Only a few minutes elapsed in the second quarter before Sherman smashed through to the goal from the two-yard line for the first Oregon score. A second touchdown was scored with dispatch, Gilmore carrying the ball from the six-yard marker.

Before the half ended the Aggies had counted a third, McKalp taking a pass from Gilmore behind his own goal. Maple added an extra point to this one.

The fourth Oregon touchdown came in the third quarter with Hughes scoring. This brought the

Tech Sanction for Coast Trip Expected Soon

By United Press

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 30.—Official sanction for the Georgia Tech football team to play the University of California in the "tournament of roses" in Pasadena, Jan. 1, was expected when the Tech faculty met today.

The invitation from President W. W. Campbell of the University of California was received Wednesday. The college athletic board Thursday voted to recommend to the faculty that the "Golden Tornado" be allowed to make the trip.

After the faculty approves the invitation, Tech officials will take a telegraphic poll of southern conference teams to play other than scheduled games is always under a special ruling.

DRAKE COPS LAURELS

By Times Special

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 30.—Drake half

back, scored the lone touchdown on a fifteen-yard run in the last few minutes of play.

Line Holds and Backs Go 'Many Places.'

BY DICK MILLER

Tufts football squad, hailed as one of the strong elevens of the east, was en route back home to Medford, Mass., today, convinced they had encouraged an entirely superior foe in Butler university gridironers, who defeated them 26 to 3 here Thursday. The Bulldogs ran rough shod over the easterners at the Butler stadium in the intersectional scrap. At no time did Tufts players display enough power to lead the 7,000 spectators to believe they might defeat Potsy Clark's aggregation.

Using for the first time a shift that was built along military lines, the Bulldogs began a march shortly after the first whistle that was momentarily stopped only when the new shift drew penalties or the eastern line rose for a brief stand only to crumble on the next play or two.

Hinchman Scores

Cavesie, the big Butler half back, who warmed the bench most of the year because of a leg injury, was in the fray and started the ball rolling goalward with a twenty-five-yard dash. Hinchman and Royse added dashes that took the oval to within a foot of the goal and three line crashes failed, but Hinchman dove over and Royse missed the kick for extra point.

Ellis Drop Kicks

After battling even for most of the second quarter the eastern team showed a flash of strength after they recovered a Butler fumble on the six-yard line, but they were not sure they could carry the ball over on the fourth down and Ellis dropped back and booted a pretty drop kick over the cross bar. The half ended 13 to 3.

In the second half Butler intercepted several Tuft forward passes.

Light for End

By NEA Service

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Oscar Gerth, who played a regular end position with the Catholic university team here, will not be mentioned on any All-American squads, but he claims one distinction—he was the lightest varsity end on any big team in the country this year.

Gerth, who comes from Philadelphia, weighs only 138 pounds in his equipment, but he was one of the best blockers and chargers on the 1920 team.

and after one of these Hinchman smashed off a couple of long runs and Royse made a touchdown. He missed the kick.

The pride this section always has held in the brand of football played along the Atlantic seaboard, received a severe jolt Thursday when a white-clad team from Oregon outclassed the New York university eleven, 23 to 12.

Should army fall before the attack of Leland Stanford on the same field Saturday, any respect the far west may have held for eastern football will have waned. A Stanford victory might even cause eastern fans to wonder if they were not a bit too proud of football as they knew it.

The New York team which lost to Oregon Thursday was a tired one, played a drive that consisted of five first downs with Ellis doing the brunt of the off-tackle running, but time was too short and just before the final whistle Butler intercepted a pass and the game was over.

The Butler starting line, end to end, was impregnable and the back field was very effective, especially in interference work. After watching the final drive of the invading line one is apt to believe it was the superior strength of the Butler regulars instead of the weakness of the Tuft eleven that brought victory to Indianapolis. Butler has several times assumed a faltered repeatedly. Aside from one or two flashes when he evaded Oregon tacklers to pile up substantial yardage, he seemed to be dogged by the same listlessness that marred the play of his teammates.

At the outset New York looked like the team that swept the east. Only a few minutes after the start of the game Strong broke loose for a long run which placed the ball near scoring position. A few plays later Beryl Follett, Violet full back, crashed over for the first touchdown. Strong added the point.

Then the visitors took the situation into their own hands and the cheerfulness of the Violet fans abated. Only a few minutes elapsed in the second quarter before Sherman smashed through to the goal from the two-yard line for the first Oregon score. A second touchdown was scored with dispatch, Gilmore carrying the ball from the six-yard marker.

Before the half ended the Aggies had counted a third, McKalp taking a pass from Gilmore behind his own goal. Maple added an extra point to this one.

The fourth Oregon touchdown came in the third quarter with Hughes scoring. This brought the Proud New York 'U' Eleven Upset and Outclassed by Aggies; Eastern Boys Appear Worn.

By United Press

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The reputation of eastern football as far as gridiron fans of the far west are concerned, lies in the hands of the army.

The pride this section always has held in the brand of football played along the Atlantic seaboard, received a severe jolt Thursday when a white-clad team from Oregon outclassed the New York university eleven, 23 to 12.

Should army fall before the attack of Leland Stanford on the same field Saturday, any respect the far west may have held for eastern football will have waned. A Stanford victory might even cause eastern fans to wonder if they were not a bit too proud of football as they knew it.

The New York team which lost to Oregon Thursday was a tired one, played a drive that consisted of five first downs with Ellis doing the brunt of the off-tackle running, but time was too short and just before the final whistle Butler intercepted a pass and the game was over.

The Butler starting line, end to end, was impregnable and the back field was very effective, especially in interference work. After watching the final drive of the invading line one is apt to believe it was the superior strength of the Butler regulars instead of the weakness of the Tuft eleven that brought victory to Indianapolis. Butler has several times assumed a faltered repeatedly. Aside from one or two flashes when he evaded Oregon tacklers to pile up substantial yardage, he seemed to be dogged by the same listlessness that marred the play of his teammates.

At the outset New York looked like the team that swept the east. Only a few minutes after the start of the game Strong broke loose for a long run which placed the ball near scoring position. A few plays later Beryl Follett, Violet full back, crashed over for the first touchdown. Strong added the point.

Then the visitors took the situation into their own hands and the cheerfulness of the Violet fans abated. Only a few minutes elapsed in the second quarter before Sherman smashed through to the goal from the two-yard line for the first Oregon score. A second touchdown was scored with dispatch, Gilmore carrying the ball from the six-yard marker.

Before the half ended the Aggies had counted a third, McKalp taking a pass from Gilmore behind his own goal. Maple added an extra point to this one.

The fourth Oregon touchdown came in the third quarter with Hughes scoring. This brought the

Well, Well, Well! Big Town Slickers Poked on Chin by Oregon Farmers

By United Press

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—The reputation of eastern football as far as gridiron fans of the far west are concerned, lies in the hands of the army.

The pride this section always has held in the brand of football played along the Atlantic seaboard, received a severe jolt Thursday when a white-clad team from Oregon outclassed the New York university eleven, 23 to 12.

Should army fall before the attack of Leland Stanford on the same field Saturday, any respect the far west may have held for eastern football will have waned. A Stanford victory might even cause eastern fans to wonder if they were not a bit too proud of football as they knew it.

The New York team which lost to Oregon Thursday was a tired one, played a drive that consisted of five first downs with Ellis doing the brunt of the off-tackle running, but time was too short and just before the final whistle Butler intercepted a pass and the game was over.

The Butler starting line, end to end, was impregnable and the back field was very effective, especially in interference work. After watching the final drive of the invading line one is apt to believe it was the superior strength of the Butler regulars instead of the weakness of the Tuft eleven that brought victory to Indianapolis. Butler has several times assumed a faltered repeatedly. Aside from one or two flashes when he evaded Oregon tacklers to pile up substantial yardage, he seemed to be dogged by the same listlessness that marred the play of his teammates.

At the outset New York looked like the team that swept the east. Only a few minutes after the start of the game Strong broke loose for a long run which placed the ball near scoring position. A few plays later Beryl Follett, Violet full back, crashed over for the first touchdown. Strong added the point.

Then the visitors took the situation into their own hands and the cheerfulness of the Violet fans abated. Only a few minutes elapsed in the second quarter before Sherman smashed through to the goal from the two-yard line for the first Oregon score. A second touchdown was scored with dispatch, Gilmore carrying the ball from the six-yard marker.

Before the half ended the Aggies had counted a third, McKalp taking a pass from Gilmore behind his own goal. Maple added an extra point to this one.

The fourth Oregon touchdown came in the third quarter with Hughes scoring. This brought the

Tech Sanction for Coast Trip Expected Soon

By United Press

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 30.—Official sanction for the Georgia Tech football team to play the University of California in the "tournament of roses" in Pasadena, Jan. 1, was expected when the Tech faculty met today.

The invitation from President W. W. Campbell of the University of California was received Wednesday. The college athletic board Thursday voted to recommend to the faculty that the "Golden Tornado" be allowed to make the trip.

After the faculty approves the invitation, Tech officials will take a telegraphic poll of southern conference teams to play other than scheduled games is always under a special ruling.

DRAKE COPS LAURELS

By Times Special

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 30.—Drake half

back, scored the lone touchdown on a fifteen-yard run in the last few minutes of play.

university today stood winner of the championship of the reorganized Missouri Valley conference by virtue of Thursday's victory over Creighton, 6 to 0. Dick Nesbit, Drake half back, scored the lone touchdown on a fifteen-yard run in the last few minutes of play.

university today stood winner of the championship of the reorganized Missouri Valley conference by virtue of Thursday's victory over Creighton, 6 to 0. Dick Nesbit, Drake half back, scored the lone touchdown on a fifteen-yard run in the last few minutes of play.

university today stood winner of the championship of the reorganized Missouri Valley conference by virtue of Thursday's victory over Creighton, 6 to 0. Dick Nesbit, Drake half