BLOODY AUTO STARTS MURDER CLEW SEARCH

Rumor Head of Woman Found Proves False; Stirr Countryside.

By United Press SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 30.—Reports that an automobile containing the head of a woman, covered with blood, had been found in Old Forge, today started anthracite region police officials on the trail of a supposed gruesome murder mystery.

State police officials who investigated first reports of the finding of the car with the head of a woman in it later denied that any head had been found.

They said that an automobile, the tonneau of which was soaked with blood, had been discovered. In the tonneau was a bloody shirt.

The chief Burgess of Old Forge, where the find was made, blamed faulty telephone transmission for the erroneous report of the finding of the head.

The blood-stained automobile was parked in the rear of a notorious roadhouse in Old Forge.

State police, in attempting to reach the scene, are said to have wrecked two automobiles. No one was injured in these accidents, it was said.

Police are of the opinion that, even with the failure of the head rumor to materialize, that murder had been committed in the machine.
