

TARIFF TINKERS TO START TOIL NEXT MONDAY

Revised Law in Operation
by July, Is Hope Voiced
by Chairman.

By Times Special
WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—A revised tariff law will be operative by July, provided Herbert Hoover calls a special session of congress in the spring.

Representative Willis C. Hawley of Oregon, chairman of the house ways and means committee, made this prediction today, in commenting on the hearings on tariff revision opening next Monday.

"This will not be an entire new tariff, but rather a tariff revision," he said. "The committee will have the bill completed by April 20, and if congress is in session I expect its passage before July 4."

Need for a complete new tariff law is obviated, Hawley said, by the fact that the Fordney-McCumber act, passed in 1922, took 440 articles from the free list and placed them on the dutiable list.

Hawley said that applications received from various industries desiring to be heard by the committee indicate that the principal changes in the present tariff law will be on agricultural products, cement, glass, some textile schedules, kid and goat leather, and lumber.

Although the hearings starting Monday will be held before the entire committee, the actual writing of the new tariff law will be made by its Republican members. To simplify and expedite procedure, fifteen separate committees of three members each will hold executive sessions on the various tariff schedules.

Indications are, however, that most of the interested industries are combining forces to have one special counsel present their entire case.

The complete schedule of hearings is as follows: Chemicals, oils and paints, Jan. 7, 8 and 9; earth and glassware, Jan. 10 and 11; metals, Jan. 14, 15 and 16; woods, Jan. 17 and 18; sugar, Jan. 21 and 22; tobacco, Jan. 23; agricultural products, Jan. 24, 25 and 28; spirits and wines, Jan. 29; cotton manufactures, Jan. 30, 31 and Feb. 1; flax, hemp and jute, Feb. 4 and 5; wool and manufacturers of Feb. 6, 7 and 8; silk and silk goods, Feb. 11 and 12; papers and books, Feb. 13 and 14; sundries, Feb. 15, 18 and 19; free list, Feb. 20, 21 and 22; and administrative, Feb. 25.

NATURE STUDY CLUB TO HAVE BUSY MONTH

Six Events Are Arranged for Members in January.

The Indiana Nature Study Club, beginning its twenty-first year, offers its members an unusually full program for January.

Beginning with a hike Sunday afternoon, six January meetings have been arranged, and a new attendance record for the month is expected to be set.

Sunday's hike will end at the Riverton nurseries, where Scott McCoy will lecture on trees and shrubs.

"Wild Animals of Indiana" will be the subject of an illustrated lecture by George N. Mannfield, superintendent of the fish and game conservation department of Indiana, who will address club members in Croxley hall next Saturday night.

Birds, world travel, and other interesting subjects will be discussed at other meetings of the club, and the month's program will end with a hike Jan. 27.

Boom Started

The next secretary of agriculture may be Eugene D. Funk of Bloomington, Ill., if President-Elect Hoover takes the advice of the state farmers' institutes of Illinois and Iowa. These organizations have sent resolutions to the new President endorsing Funk for this position. Funk helped Hoover distribute food and supplies during the war. He has made a life study of corn improvement and grain diseases.

U. S. PARLEY ON FLU IS CALLED

Nation's Leading Scientists to Meet Jan. 10.

By Science Service

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—A general review of the whole influenza situation will be made at the conference to which Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon-general of the United States public health service, has invited leading scientists, physicians and health officers of all the states and of the principal cities of the country.

The conference will be held at the surgeon-general's office here on Jan. 10.

The public health service has a plan for research which will be discussed with these leaders in the field of epidemiology. Measures of controlling influenza, so as to prevent further epidemics, if possible, may be decided upon, and additional lines for research may be opened up.

Public health officials hope that some way of controlling the disease will be found when men who study it in the laboratory, men who treat it at the bedside and men who watch its progress from nation-wide reports get together and pool their knowledge and ideas.

At present the epidemic seems to be waning in the west, but it is by no means checked as yet, health officials stated. Thirty states and New York city reported together about 140,000 cases, indicating a total of approximately 700,000 cases for these states. Many eastern states, including such populous ones as New York and Pennsylvania, do not report influenza.
