Feb. 5—Soiree at the home of Mrs. Oscar Baur, 4919 North Meridian street.

Feb. 19—Mme. Chamilovitch will give an illustrated lecture on "Paris from the Gallo-Roman Period to the Fifteenth Century."

March 5—Edward Petri will speak on "Precious Stones and Famous Jewelry," the second of a series of three lectures to be given by him on this subject during the club year.

Tuesday noon luncheons will be continued on dates on which no luncheon meeting is held. The next luncheon will be at the Spink-Arms hotel Jan. 15.

Frank L. Riggs Chosen President of Birthday Club

Frank L. Riggs was elected president of the January First Birthday Club at a meeting Saturday evening at the home of Charles E. Gielow, 59 North Sherman drive.

Other officers are George W. Peary, vice-president; Edward Soltan, secretary; Gielow, treasurer, and Robert E. Guild, correspondent. Otto B. Aitwater, the other member, is in Sebring, Fla.

The organization was formed twenty years ago by three men whose birthdays were on Jan. 5, and a few years ago three other men were added to the rolls. Their are associate members and their children are junior members.

The celebration this year was in the form of an old-fashioned party. Games were played and a spelling bee held. Miss Betty Simon played several violin solos, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Elmer Simon. Members exchanged gifts. The party adjourned to the Sherman Inn where supper was served.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hartman, and daughter, Miss Helen Hartman, and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Simon, and daughter, Miss Betty Simon.

The next party will be held at the home of George W. Peary.

COUPLE CELEBRATES WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Rolla Smith of Tipton celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with an open house and family dinner at their home.

All of the couple's seven children with the exception of Mrs. Daniels, New Haven, Conn., were present. The children who were home were Lawrence and Rona Smith, Bridgeport; Ivory Smith, Cedar Corner; Everett Smith, Indianapolis; the Rev. Albert Smith, Tipton, and Mrs. Ethel Trimble, near Windfall.

Mr. Smith, widely known as an evangelistic singer, has been a farmer here for many years.

Presents Collection

A collection of Mexican curios, approximately two hundred pieces, valued at hundreds of dollars, were presented to the Evansville Society of Fine Arts by Mrs. Robert Lansing of Washington. John W. Foster, father of Mrs. Lansing, made the collection while he was minister to Mexico. The collection includes a group of idols dating back to Aztec civilization.

Four children who are living assisted. They are Mrs. R. C. Pickle of Mulberry, Mrs. Alva Doty, Frankfort; Lee McDole, near Lafayette, and Mrs. Maude Antrim, Lafayette.

Old-fashioned Bessie

The woman who slumps on certain days of every month has not kept abreast of the times. Midol has made painful periods a thing of the past for thousands of women! Midol is not a narcotic. It does not interfere with the natural and necessary process of nature. But it stops the pain. It eases the organs affected in five to seven minutes. Furthermore, the woman who anticipates and takes a tiny tablet of Midol beforehand will experience no pain at all.

Try to realize Midol does really end all suffering, even discomfort, no matter how hard a time you've always had. At drugstores, in trim aluminum case for fifty cents.—Advertisement.

HATS FOR SPRING OF NOVELTY STRAWS

Novelty straws fashion colorful new spring hats. (Left to right) Paton trims a lacy bangkok hat in sunburst shade with a grosgrain banding, and a buckle of wood and ivory. A multicolored Yeda pallassoon hat, with drooping sides, has soft taffeta ribbon in gay shades to match the straw. One of the smartest new hats is of tweed silk straw, in navy blue and white, with a banding and facing of navy blue.

BY JEAN PATOU For NEA Service

PARIS, Jan. 7.—Hat modes created for the mid-winter collections are more indicative of the spring than the dresses they are meant to accompany. One of the reasons for this is that considerably more latitude is allowed in a hat than in an ensemble.

In any creative sphere the eye must work in conjunction with the fingers, but in millinery the contrary is the case, because here the handwork is the prime factor. This is perhaps the reason why a hat always looks newer, more decided in character, than a new dress.

Another factor is that millinery is essentially capricious in its manifestations, but even so, a hat must follow the general lines of fashion although it is only an accessory. In spite of the fact that my dresses for mid-winter wear are still subdued in hue, you will find hats conspicuous, for the most part, for their note of gaiety and brightness. They almost unavoidably make you think of a bright sunny day in March.

Materials Combined

Many mid-season hats are made of straw and felt combined, as though expressing a tinge of regret in this forestalling of the seasons. The springlike aspect of the straw is thus somewhat subdued by the use of felt, preventing it from looking too unseasonal.

Among the newest ideas to be found in my salons are hats made of a straw shape with a wide mesh like a fishing net which is fitted onto a felt shape. Yellow and chartreuse green on black and beige on blue are the color combinations used so far.

Youth Rebels When Elders Break Rules

By MARTHA LEE

Life would be almost perfect for youngsters if the older folk could only appreciate how sensitive they are. Really, most of them are flexible and need just a little understanding and sympathy.

But somehow, after we have grown up, we forget that we ever had sensitiveness in our make-up. We forget how deeply things hurt us; how bitterly we revolted against our elders when they were thoughtless of our feelings. And as a result, even though it may be subconsciousness on our parts, we injure them almost mortally in spirit. Children and adolescent youth are always being confronted with the sight of their elders doing exactly what they have just told them they, as youngsters, must do. As a general rule there is no explanation offered along with this, merely a remonstrance, without the slightest explanation of why it should be avoided by them as children and why it may be done by grownup. The children are baffled and belligerent. Of course, they can not understand that line of reasoning. It is foolish to believe that they could.

The result is deceit on the part of the children, because what do they see their parents practicing but deceit? Not only in their relationship to themselves as minors, but even toward their acquaintances. What does an impressively minded child think when he hears his mother squeal with glee when she receives a certain caller, talk nicely while she is there, and the minute she is gone rush to the telephone to tell Mrs. Whiff-Niff what a perfectly dreadful gown Mrs. Gonzaba wore that afternoon; how coarse her voice was getting and that she is almost positive she has touched her hair up a bit. If it is a girl child taking things in, she probably will go to school next day and try to pull that sort of stuff on her classmates. If it is a boy child, he probably will unconsciously form an opinion that all women, even his own mother, who is really quite perfect, are pretty much a two-faced lot.

I have a letter today from a 15-year-old girl, who, in spite of her studied sophistication and wisdom, is floundering around to find the answer to this grown-up problem:

My dear Miss Lee—I am 15 years old (nearly) and a sophomore in high school. I have an older brother, but he doesn't pay any attention to me, and that's all of our family. My father, who has been a successful business world is a confirmed back-slapper and wise-cracker. My mother is a pretty good sort, but addicted to bridge and talking over the telephone. What I want to know is this: How do the parents get that way, telling us not to do things and then turning right around and doing them themselves? If I start to say something about some one in school, "Margie didn't have her lessons," or "Jane had a brown dress on today and she looks awfully sallow in brown," mother says "Tch, tch. You mustn't talk about your little friends."

And yet I've heard her on the phone when what she didn't say about the lady who just left the house was just too bad. And that's only one incident. What do you make out of that sort of stuff?

MARIAN.

Well, my dear child, I suppose you will just have to get very tolerant and accept those things as part of the penalty of growing up. It is too bad, but I don't know a thing to do about it. Human relationships become more and more involved as the years go on.

Perhaps your mother must be nice to So-and-So because your father gets a big order from them each year. That may be what we like to cloak under the term "business" or "diplomacy." But if she does stoop to such measures, she should at least be self-respecting enough to keep it to herself.

I know it's all very baffling. Grown-ups are so much more inconsistent and illogical than youngsters, as a general rule, just because their vision has too many horizons. You'll just have to adopt a philosophy for yourself about these strange ways of the grown-ups and determine in your heart of hearts that you will never forget these disappointments and hurts when you yourself are agrownup with children.

FASHION TAKES TO SKIIS
