WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—When Secretary of Commerce William F. Whiting leaves Washington official life—whether next week or years later—he will return to Holyoke, Mass., and to his books, his business, and his farm.

He has enjoyed his cabinet service under President Coolidge, a fellow New Englander whom he greatly admires.

"Washington is going to miss Mr. Coolidge when he leaves here," Secretary Whiting told the United Press in an exclusive interview today.

Misses Walks on Farm

"Reading is my chief pastime when business hours are over," the commerce secretary said. "I love a good book, particularly in the fields of history and philosophy." He likes Shakespeare and grand opera.

He takes his exercise by walking—no golf.

"You know, I've missed that more than anything else since I came to Washington," he said. "When I'm in Holyoke I often go out to my farm late in the afternoon. It is in a hilly country and walking around out there is great exercise."

The commerce secretary is owner of one of the nation's largest paper businesses. It is managed by his three sons.

Believes in Men

Secretary Whiting was asked for a few of his observations on life and men.

He sat behind his massive mahogany desk and pondered. His hair is snow white, his complexion is ruddy and his figure trim. He was dressed as usual in a morning coat, stiff-bosomed shirt and a small black bow tie.

Tolerance and fair dealing were at the heart of the life theories he set out.

"I have always tried," Secretary Whiting said, "to form my own estimate of men from what I see of them and not be influenced by what others say."

He said he felt men are fair and honest by nature.

The Indians are to form an escort of honor for Vice-President Charles Curtis, who has Kaw Indian blood in his veins, at the inaugural parade Monday. The Osage Indians, the wealthiest Indian tribe of the country, because of oil-found on their lands, and the Pawnees, are paying the expenses of the train.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 27.—Byron C. Parker, attorney for Mrs. Edna Sharp, who confessed kidnapping 4-year-old Doris Virginia Murphy, announced today he would seek to fill the jury box at Mrs. Sharp's trial with mothers and fathers.

"I don't believe there is a mother or father in San Francisco who will want to send her to San Quentin prison after hearing her story of how she took Doris to love as a baby of her own," the attorney said.

At the same time Chief of Police William J. Quinn declared "that woman deserves no sympathy."

FARM BUREAU TRACES HOAX

Bills Sent in Envelopes of Federation.

Indiana Farm Bureau Federation officials today asked the assistance of the post office in determining who mailed copies of bills to 150 Indiana legislators in envelopes bearing the farm bureau's name.

Each senator and representative today found a bulky letter containing copies of house bill 148, which the bureau approved, and senate bill 275, which the organization disapproved, awaiting him.

The letters were sent without the bureau's knowledge, according to Addison Drake, bureau director, and W. B. Nugent, legislative representative of the bureau.

The house bill originally provided for the repeal of the 1927 act per-

HEALTH APOSTLE IS BOOKED OVER RADIO

An invitation to speak over radio station WFBM has been extended to Captain Godfrey Rodrigues, health expert, who is lecturing in Indianapolis schools this week under auspices of The Times.

The captain, in his theory of health, likens man to animal. Animals do not stoop and shuffle along, he asserts. Neither are they troubled with the thousands of petty ills with which man is beset.

If a man walked as straight as a horse, most of his ills would disappear, the captain says.

His theory of correct posture has been endorsed by leading physicians and gymnasts. School officials say his theory is directly in line with methods now used in city schools.

The senate bill provides that private corporations may lease school properties to school corporations on petition of 50 per cent of the tax payers in the district.

ERROR OF $20 CAUSES SUICIDE

Postal Clerk Kills Self for Imaginary Shortage.

By United Press

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 27.—It was written into the records of the Harrison branch post office today that Albert J. Kubler, who committed suicide because of $20, went to an honorable death.

Before shooting himself through the head, the 64-year-old postal clerk, left a letter to his wife, Theresa, which said:

"Please forgive me if you can. Life has gotten so I can no longer stand it. My head hurts so I am getting out of my mind. I am about to take that life which I should devote to you and my dear children. I have committed an act in my life that only my life can pay. I covered a shortage in my stamp account with a check when I had no deposit at the bank. The inspectors found it and now I am disgraced. My heart is so full of love for you that I could live down anything but not this. Your loving husband."

"ALBERT."

Postal inspectors found the check all right, but they also found that the $20 shortage existed only in the tortured mind of an old man whose dimming eyesight had played tricks with his mathematics.
