

FEDERALS MOVE NORTH TO STOP REBEL RETREAT

Mexican Government Plans Offensives in North and South.

BY G. F. FINE,
United Press Staff Correspondent
MEXICO CITY, April 5.—Victorious federal troops continued to press northward today to round up remnants of the insurgent Escobar army, in full retreat from Reforma, where, according to government reports, more than 1,000 rebels were killed in battle.

The official announcement said Escobar's army of approximately 5,000 men also had lost 2,000 prisoners and 500 wounded in the "butchery" at Reforma.

General Juan A. Almazan, who commanded the federal attack at Reforma, reported to Minister of War Plutarco Elias Calles that he expected his cavalry to reach Camargo, forty miles north of Jimenez, early today. He added, however, that he did not expect any concerted resistance from the rebels until the federal army arrived at Chihuahua City, the insurgent stronghold.

Plan to Open Southern Drive

Meanwhile the army of 5,000 men, which has been held in reserve at Torreón pending results in the Jimenez section, was preparing for its southern campaign against the Cristeros, the religious rebels.

General Calles notified the government that General Almazan was of the opinion that the rebel rout was decisive, and while their dispersed groups might reunite, there was only a slight possibility of rebel resistance south of Chihuahua City.

Almazan asked Calles for instructions on the disposition of rebel General Frederico Barrera, and other rebel officers among the prisoners. Almazan believed other rebel leaders were fleeing to the United States.

Federal Casualties Unknown

Calles' messages to the government came from Torreón, and reported that both the federal and rebel injured were sent to hospitals at Monterey and Torreón. Calles said that no figures of federal casualties were available because the checkup had not been completed.

Airplane observers reported to Almazan that insurgent cavalry was last seen north of Camargo. They also saw a rebel train, apparently en route to Chihuahua City, north of Camargo. Calles said trains were moving as rapidly as possible to open communication between Jimenez and Reforma.

The rebels on the west coast have evacuated Guilaican, according to dispatches received from federal General Lazaro Cardenas. He said the insurgents were being pursued northward, toward San Blas.
