

CONGRESS WILL FIGHT TO KEEP PORT FREEDOM

Britten Takes Lead in Opposing Plan to Abolish Courtesy.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, May 3.—Congress is not disposed to end the freedom of the port privilege extended government officials when they return to the United States from official trips abroad, some members indicated today.

Representative Fred A. Britten (Rep., Ill.) took the lead in opposing the recommendation of a New York grand jury investigating the case of Representative Morgan (Rep., Ohio), that such courtesy would be abolished.

"Not one official in one thousand even thinks about violating the courtesy of freedom of the port which allows baggage to pass through custom officers without an examination," Britten said. "Nothing is brought back from these trips that could be called contraband and the privilege is not abused by members of congress."

Should Take Many Trips

"When an official returns from abroad he should be allowed to leave the dock immediately to complete his official mission instead of being delayed for a baggage inspection with some 2,000 other passengers."

Representative William M. Morgan, who was accused of bringing liquor into the United States when given freedom of the New York port upon returning from a trip to Panama recently, also believes the courtesy should continue.

"I recommend that all congressmen take as many trips as possible so as to see actual conditions in other countries," he said. "They especially should visit Panama. Such surveys are official business and the representatives' entry into the United States upon returning should be expedited," Morgan said.

Comments on Decision

Commenting on the New York grand jury's action in disposing of his case and its opinion that persons with the freedom of the port could bring in anything in their baggage without interference, Morgan said:

"I can only repeat my previous declaration that there was no liquor in my baggage or in the baggage of any of my party when we returned from Panama. About a score of people saw my luggage opened and they know there was nothing illegal in it. The action of the grand jury merely is a further indication of my innocence."
