

INDIANA U. BANS 'ROUGH WEEK', DECLARES DEAN

Severe Initiations, Blamed for Boy's Death, Are Abolished.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., June 13.—Reports attributing the death of George Steinmetz, Indiana student, to "rough initiation" tactics by his fraternity brothers at Indiana university, brought the statement today from Professor J. J. Robinson, dean of men, that "rough initiation," at the university was abolished several weeks ago on penalty of expulsion.

Dean Robinson said this action was taken before he had any knowledge that "rough" tactics were conducted in any way with the death from long illness with tuberculosis of the Steinmetz boy.

Dean Robinson recalled an interview with Mrs. George Steinmetz, Sr., mother of the student, May 24.

Ban Rough Tactics

"Mrs. Steinmetz said she supposed that rough ceremonies were a common practice in the universities and colleges of today. But I was happy to be able to tell her that all rough ceremonies among students here had already been abolished, with strict penalties."

"The campus daily of May 14 quotes the letter which I had written to each fraternity asking that fraternity to go on record as to the abolition of 'rough' Every fraternity except two was there reported to have voted to abolish 'rough,' and the interfraternity council was there reported as unanimously affirming the resolution that 'rough' be abolished.

"The campus daily of May 21 quotes a statement which was issued from this office on Saturday, May 18, under the head, 'I. U. Will Enforce No-Rough Rule.' In this statement I said 'It will be the policy of the dean of men to hold accountable for the observance of this rule each organization president and other officers.'

Penalty Is Expulsion
The penalty here, as elsewhere, will be expulsion. Moreover, each organization, including all honorary organizations and others, will be held responsible for the observance of the rule. There will be no room for question or doubt in regard to the upholding of the no-rough rule by the joint action of the students, the organizations, and the university authorities. The sentiment on the campus and throughout the state is so overwhelming, that, it will not be possible for an attempted violation of the rule to be successful."

Rags Mourns

Warden Fogarty's Dog, Just a Derelict, Has Lost His World.

By Times Special

CHICAGO, June 13.—Friends lost a genial companion, relatives a kindly helpmate, the nation a foremost expert in the real reformation of criminals in the suicide of Edward J. Fogarty, warden of Cook county jail here, but Rags, his constant airedale, has lost his world.

Jail attaches do not attempt to explain it, they just report these facts:

Months ago Mr. Fogarty picked Rags up out of an alley and laying him on him the same thoughtful care he gave human derelicts, made a dog out of him.

Rags repaid his master with a devotion which came to be a jail tradition.

A month ago Mr. Fogarty, near a breakdown, was ordered away for a rest by his physician.

Attaches said that a few days later it began to look as if Rags, too, was near a breakdown.

Then came the news of Mr. Fogarty's death. Rags can not know exactly what has happened, but jail employees swear he has touched neither food nor water since the hour of the fatal deed, 2:25 Tuesday afternoon.

They missed him Wednesday and found him behind a coal pile in the basement, a vacant, broken-hearted look in his eyes.

He said he is spending only $600 a year for rent. Before this relief he had to pay rent and clerk hire out of his own salary and fees.

MILLION LEFT EACH OF FOUR THAW CHILDREN

Mother of Harry Fails in Ambition to Spend All Before Death.

By United Press

PITTSBURGH, June 13.—Despite her determination to use most of her fortune during her lifetime, Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, who died at her Pittsburgh home Sunday at the age of 87, left approximately a million dollars to each of her four children in her will, filed for probate today with the registrar of wills.

Rags repaid his master with a devotion which came to be a jail tradition.

A month ago Mr. Fogarty, near a breakdown, was ordered away for a rest by his physician.

Attaches said that a few days later it began to look as if Rags, too, was near a breakdown.

The four children, each of whom will receive a fifth of the estate, are Harry K. Thaw, Josiah C. Thaw of New York, the Countess De Peigny of Paris, and Mrs. Alice Thaw Whitney of Boston, former wife of the earl of Yarmouth.

Thaw died leaving fifth of the estate will be divided into three parts, one of which will go to the Third Presbyterian church of Pittsburgh, of which the aged philanthropist was a lifelong member.

A second share will go to the Theological seminary, near Omaha, Neb., each faculty member of the seminary receiving $1,000, and the third share was left to the trustees of Washington college in Tennessee, the oldest college west of the Allegheny mountains, as a memorial to her late son, Edward Thaw.

Mrs. Thaw directed that all indebtedness in excess of $50,000, which was owed her by Harry K. Thaw, shall be canceled.

Knowing the minds of her children, as to their determinations Mrs. Thaw said in her will she did not designate any specific amount they should receive as it was her plan to leave as her residuary estate little more than enough to pay her debts and such legacies as she specified.

Despite this determination Mrs. Thaw's will, it is believed, will leave approximately $4,000,000 to be divided evenly among her four living children.

Her illness during the last four years of her life, which held her bedfast, interfered with Mrs. Thaw's plan and prevented her from spending the largest portion of her vast wealth.

Helen Keller, famous for her work in improving the conditions of the blind, was left $5,000, and Miss Keller's teacher, Mrs. J. A. Macy, a like amount.
