

FOREMAN SLAIN BY CONVICT IN PRISON LAUNDRY

Slayer Once Declared He Would Like to Exterminate Human Race.

By United Press
LEAVENWORTH, Kan., June 21.—Carl Panzran, federal prisoner here from Washington, who once told officers he would like to "exterminate the entire human race," Thursday became the storm center of a riotous scene in the prison laundry in which R. G. Warnke, foreman, was struck dead with an iron pipe.

Prisoners said Panzran struck Warnke from behind shortly after the foreman had entered the laundry.

Panzran then ran into the prison street, swinging his pipe, and attempting to strike other prisoners, it was said.

Warnke, 40 years old, died of a fractured skull.

The Washington prisoner, serving a twenty-five-year sentence for robbery, was placed in solitary confinement while Warden Thomas B. White began investigation of the incident.

Phil Holtgrave, a laundry guard, captured Panzran after a chase.

Wide attention was attracted to the prisoner last fall when, after being indicted for burglary, he confessed to numerous murders in eastern cities and said he had once planned to poison a city's water supply.

Among his confessions was that to murder of a Philadelphia boy. It was understood police later checked some of the confessions and found them fabricated.

During his trial at Washington last November, Panzran threatened witnesses who appeared against him.

STATE WARS ON SALE OF 'BOOTLEG BONDS'

Dealers on Unregistered Stocks Face Severe Penalties.

Bootlegging bottled-in-bond (alleged) is not uncommon in Hoosierdom, despite Frank (Bone-dry) Wright and the Rev. E. S. Shumaker, but bootlegging bonds is also becoming common and must stop, Earl Coble, chief examiner of the state securities commission announced today.

"Bootleg bonds" are those sold in the state but not registered with the securities commission, as required by statute.

Those caught engaging in such practice are subject to a fine up to $5,000 and imprisonment to five years, Coble said.

GERMAN'S COMMISSION AS OFFICIAL REVOKED

Embassy Shows Disqualifications to Governor Leslie.

As the result of correspondence between Governor Harry G. Leslie and the German ambassador at Washington, Carl Leimbach, Osnabrueck, Germany, may find himself without a job.

He had been given a commission as commissioner of deeds for Indiana, upon proper filing of credentials with the secretary of state. The German embassy called the Governor's attention to the fact that Leimbach is not qualified under "the laws of nations."

So today Governor Leslie ordered Secretary of State Otto G. Field to revoke the commission.

Two Men Accused of Throwing 'Oil Bombs' at Signs.

Trial of two men charged with "racketeering" following their arrest and confessions on a charge of throwing "oil bombs" at outdoor signs will be held in criminal court July 8.

The men are Harry Itskin and Frank Tichen, who admitted they threw lamp globes loaded with oil at signs erected by the General Outdoor Advertising Company, where they worked.

The county grand jury, prior to its dismissal Monday, conducted an investigation of the "bombing" and also was said to have been probing a recent explosion in an apartment at 3056 North Meridian street.
