Hail of Bullets Scatter 40 Gamblers, as Bandits Take $200.

By United Press
CH JAGO, June 24.—Forty youthful craps shooters fled in a shower of bullets when bandits crashed a Sabbath afternoon craps game in a public school yard.

Three players were wounded. They were Jack Tokowitz, 15; his cousin, Louis Tokowitz, 16, and George Rodensky, 21.

The game, which residents of the Wicker Park school district said had become a regular Sunday diversion with a professional gambler "taking a cut," was at its height when the gunmen arrived.

Two carrying revolvers approached the dice throwers. A third man, armed with a shotgun, fired. The four remained at the wheel of a sedan.

"Everybody drop your money on the sidewalk," yelled the man with the shotgun. He fired into the ground for emphasis. Boys of 15 to 21 ran in all directions. The guns blazed away. The robbers got $200.

Police later raided a dice game at Van Humboldt school nearby, arresting fifteen men.

U. S. DIPLOMACY AIDS IN SHAPING WORLD EVENTS

Americans Settle Disputes in Europe, Mexico and Peru.

BY LYLE C. WILSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, June 24.—From the plazas of Mexico to the boulevards of Paris, Americans recently have been active in diplomacy which will aid in shaping the trend of international events.

American participation in the adjustment of foreign problems has increased instead of diminished since the senate ten years ago rejected the allegedly entangling alliances inherent in the Versailles treaty and the League of Nations.

Observers are pointing to this situation in support of the belief the United States has never sought to pursue an isolationist policy.

Activities Varied

American activities in settlement of foreign problems have been of various types. Ambassador Dwight P. Morrow, whose friendly counsel is known to have expedited settlement of the Mexican religious controversy last week, acted secretly and in a private capacity.

Owen D. Young, American chairman of the reparations experts committee which has just reported from Paris, acted as a private American citizen.

While these two Americans were busy respectively with religious and financial matters, Ambassador Alexander P. Moore in Peru was formally engaged in helping Chile and Peru settle controversy over the provinces of Tacna and Arica.

Prevented War

Before Tacna Arica could be gotten out of the way, Bolivia and Paraguay were on the verge of war to determine sovereignty over a vast area lying between them, known as the Gran Chaco. Brigadier-General Frank R. McCoy is chairman of the commission in session here in an attempt to adjust the difficulty.

Last autumn, McCoy became president of the Nicaraguan electoral commission which conducted under American auspices a presidential election in that country. The publicly stated satisfaction of both the victorious and the defeated party.

Lead Naval Parleys

The most spectacular American adventure in international affairs has been in behalf of naval reduction. The first move was made in 1920, when President Warren G. Harding called the Washington arms conference.

President Calvin Coolidge's 1927 conference at Geneva failed. American efforts now have revitalized the situation, first by Ambassador Hugh Gibson's unexpected reduction proposals at Geneva and subsequently by speeches from President Herbert Hoover and Ambassador Charles G. Dawes.

Before accepting appointment to London, Dawes made a sortie to the Dominican republic to establish an efficient financial and budgetary system there.

For four years the most important international financial position in the world has been held by an American, S. Parker Gilbert, agent general of the Dawes plan. Gilbert's job will be abolished under the Young plan and in his place will be created an international bank.

DOCTOR SAYS WATER MISUSED BY MANY

Beauties Cut Down Rations to Keep Figures, States Writer.

By Times Special
HOLLYWOOD, June 24.—The misuse of water—just simple water, for drinking and bathing—is doing as much to impair the health of American women as any other factor in daily life, according to Dr. H. B. K. Willis, Hollywood physician, who is consultant to many leading stars of the film colony here.

Dr. Willis finds that many of the film beauties have been cutting down their water ration to almost nothing in their efforts to keep the straight-line figure demanded by fashion; also that they have been trying to steam off weight in over heated baths to the sea end. Both processes, he points out in a warning article in Photoplay Magazine, are futile and dangerous—certain to be followed by nerve and digestive disorders if continued long enough.

NEXT to the eyes, the mouth is the most outstanding feature of the face. Being, generally, rouged into brilliance, it is often the focus of our companions' gaze, especially when we talk.

"There is more to making up the mouth than merely running a lipstick over the lips," Mary Brian explains. "Because of the vivid shades of most lip rouges, one must be careful to blend the color skillfully to avoid a harsh outline.

"Before beginning to make up the mouth, be sure the lips are soft and smooth. Nothing is uglier than rough, chapped lips. A white lipstick is soothing to chapped lips and, if used consistently, will not only cure but prevent chapping.

"An oily, moist rouge is preferable to dry. It is prettier on the lips and also is more easily applied. Spreading a dry lipstick on the lips will cause them to wrinkle. Never make up the lips until the rest of the face is made up.

"I prefer to use a cream rouge, to be applied to the lips with a finger, rather than a lipstick. Whichever is used, begin on the inside of the lip, blending the color to the edges, all over the lips. Put on lots at first, then wipe off the surplus. Keep blending until it is smooth and lovely. Powder over the mouth and wet the lips again with the tongue to remove the powder. This will give a natural expression and remove any harshly-drawn edges."

NEW YORK, June 24.—Whether posterity is going to appreciate all the gifts this generation plans to leave it or not is problematical. Certainly nothing needs to be lost, and immortality gets cheaper by the minute.

The great have had the edge on the rest of us for some time. Top-notch singers, through the phonograph, could leave their high C's recorded in wax.

Movie stars could retain their sex appeal in celluloid, and talkies have made the actor's voice a possible delight to him long after the public has forgotten him.

But, until now, no one bothered much about how the rest of us felt regarding obitvation. Now, dollar in hand, you can have your voice canned in aluminum.

Mrs. Enrico Caruso, widow of the famed tenor, and her brother, R. P. Benjamin, have just opened a studio where voice recording may be had, under very pleasant conditions, at the price mentioned above.

"This is the first time I have ever felt interested in going into business," said Mrs. Caruso, "though I happen to have a name that has commercial value and I have been approached many, many times to go into some shop or some project where such a name was a valuable asset."

Not So Slow

By United Press
WILMETTE, Ill., June 24.—Louis K. Gillson, attorney and president of the Wilmette park board, sprang a new one when arraigned for driving thirty-four miles an hour in Sheridan road.

"I'm 77 years old," he said, "and I've been traveling at the same speed since horse and buggy days."

The judge dismissed the case.

decorating, or any of the pursuits that have attracted so many society women, but naturally I have a great interest in music, and in making recording possible for the masses.

"Before this, any one with a hundred dollars could have a record made. But many people who would benefit most by this were unable to spend so much. Putting this within the reach of every one is a proposition that appeals to me."

In four minutes from the time you start to make your record—if you make the smallest size—you can hear it, and take it out with you.

The process is apparently very simple. The performer talks, sings or giggles, according to his mode of presentation, into an instrument which looks like the ordinary microphone. The sound is recorded simultaneously on a plain aluminum disc, in a machine that looks like the regulation phonograph.

Mrs. Caruso is interested particularly in recording the voices of children.

"Because I know the satisfaction it is," she said. "I have had a record of my daughter Gloria's voice since she was 4. Children change so, their voices as well as their faces, and it is a satisfaction to go back into the past sometimes."
