TOSSES IN A MATCH

Then Walks Away and Talks to Mother-in-Law as Child Dies.

By United Press
LOS ANGELES, July 9.—Because she was "ashamed to face the milkman" to whom she owed a three weeks' bill, Mrs. Josephine Valente, 19, burned her 8-month-old son, Dominick, to death in his go-cart, she confessed to police.

Mrs. Valente, held today on a murder charge, declared her husband, Sabatino, 21, refused to give her money for the baby's milk.

"I knew of nothing else to do," she told police.

The young mother said she often tried to help by going to work, but could find no job.

"And I couldn't afford to put our boy in a nursery," she explained.

"I knew the milkman would leave us no milk," Mrs. Valente related.

"And I got to wondering what I would do."

"So I got a match and threw it into the baby's carriage after I put him to sleep in it."

"Then I walked around to the front of the house and talked with my mother-in-law until somebody shouted fire. We ran to the car, but when we got there, Dominick was dead."

Detective Lieutenant Frank Conner said a $375 insurance policy on the baby's life was issued recently.

Fifield also passed one of the new laws to State Representative William Bosser Jr. and another to Miller Smith, Scottsburg Republican politician.

Under a ruling from Attorney-General James M. Ogden the members of the legislature are automatically out of the legislative positions when they accept such executive and judicial jobs. It means little to Bosser, who would have to be re-elected to return to the legislature.

Martin is serving his second term, having first been sent to the senate during the Ku-Klux Klan days in Logansport. He is a big backer of the Horse Thief Detective Association, having introduced a bill in the last session to give them statewide powers greater than any police.

Fifield's first appointment to a judgeship under the new law was John W. McCord, former deputy attorney-general under Arthur R. Gilmore.

The law is so elastic that it leaves the number of judgeships up to the secretary of state.

KESSLER PROJECT NOT TO STOP, MILNOR SAYS

Park Board Will Go Ahead With Boulevard Plan.

In spite of the state tax board's refusal to allow bonds for Kessler boulevard extension, the plan will not be abandoned, John E. Milnor, park board president declared today.

The $282,000 asked in the proposed issue was the highest estimate and this boulevard would have cost only $175,000 under park board plans, he said.

In 1928 the park board made its first attempt to put through the Kessler plan. Property owners along the proposed boulevard donated land. The present park board felt obligated to try first to put through the old route, Milnor said.

MOTOR DEALER FIGHTS $8,000 AWARD TO GIRL

Nurse Is Given Judgment on Her Story of Seduction and Attack.

Attorneys for Harry Burke, part owner of the Burke-Cadillac Company, 1102 North Meridian street, have served notice of appeal in the $8,000 judgment granted Miss Tarria Middlesworth, 31, of 16 West Sixteenth street, Apt. 10, on a suit which charged assault and battery and seduction.

Miss Middlesworth was given a verdict for $8,000 by a jury in the circuit court of Martinsville, on May 6. Attorneys for Burke sought a new trial, but were refused on July 5. The notice of appeal followed.

Miss Middlesworth, a nurse, alleged on the stand in the trial at Martinsville that on March 20, 1928, Burke beat and choked her, causing severe injuries to her back.

She testified that she met Burke on Aug. 18, 1928. She charges that around Thanksgiving of that year he told her she was a married man. She testified that he promised to divorce his wife and marry her.

Testimony showing that Burke had taken her to Detroit, had given her silk nightgowns, had paid her rent, her grocery bills and her telephone bill, was given by Miss Middlesworth.

She alleged that Burke had given her approximately $3,500 in money, presents and payments on bills during the two years that the alleged clandestine romance lasted.

Following the alleged attack on March 20, 1928, which caused her to be taken to Detroit, had given her silk nightgowns, had paid her rent, her grocery bills and her telephone bill, was given by Miss Middlesworth.

Miss Middlesworth filed suit in a superior court of Marion county on July 7, 1928. The case was venued to Danville, Ind., and venued again to Martinsville, where it was tried.

Burke's defense in the trial was that he had never choked or struck Miss Middlesworth. His attorneys sought to break down the seduction charge with testimony that the nurse was aware that he was a married man and that it was merely an "affair" for both of them.

Miss Middlesworth is ill at her home, attorneys said. She was represented by William G. White, 805 Inland Bank building, in the trial.

S. E. Klyett of Martinsville and the firm of Willson & Willson of Indianapolis represented Burke in the trial.

A $350 claim was filed today against the estate of the late Will H. Latta, Indianapolis Street Railway Company attorney, by W. B. Inks, monument dealer of Ligonier, in probate court. According to the claim Latta bought a gravestone for himself in 1928 and had not paid for it.

Latta was killed several weeks ago when his auto was struck by a train at a crossing near Carmel. He left an estate in a 200-year trust which, at that time, is to amount to $150,000. Part of the money is to be used to build a university in Ligonier.
