

INDIANAPOLIS SIXTH SMOKIEST AMERICAN CITY

Causes Loss of $7,000,000
Annually, Declares
League Head.

Indianapolis is the sixth smokiest city in the United States, it was announced today by the Indianapolis Smoke Abatement League, Inc., organized May 17 to combat smoke hazards here.

Atmospheric density recorded during the winter by the National Association of Smoke Prevention places Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Chicago above Indianapolis in smoke density of cities in the 400,000 class.

The league plans to use every medium of publicity possible to make Indianapolis "smoke-proof," Roy Johnson, league secretary, stated.

A circular printed by the league, being distributed this week to Indianapolis business men, asserts that smoke costs Indianapolis $7,000,000 annually, and that several hundred people die in Indianapolis every year of respiratory diseases, including pneumonia, influenza and colds, as the result of smoke. Paint, rugs, clothes give only a fraction of their service because of smoke damage, the league asserts.

Johnson said that the movement would not try to restrict the use of Indiana soft coal, and that it would not directly harm any state industry. "Our movement will be gradual. We hope to secure smokeless furnaces for new buildings, eliminate of black smoke from railroad engines entering the city, and through proper firing instructions, a decrease of smoke from city furnaces," he said.

Lavish Togs for Ann

Furs worth $100,000 were used as wraps and trimmings on the beautiful clothes utilized in one scene for Pathes all-dialogue production, "Her Private Affairs," featuring Ann Harding.

The scene represented a New Year's eve celebration among the wealthiest of the aristocracy of Vienna.

Chinchilla, ermine, sable, mink and fine foxes are among the furs worn by the women.

Ann Harding, playing the lead, wore a lovely wrap of black velvet, lavishly trimmed with chinchilla of the most exquisite sort.

500 in donations from Indianapolis business men have resulted in receipts of $1,500. By the end of the year the league hopes to have thousands of people paying in $1 annual donations. The league is now operating successfully in sixty cities, Johnson stated.

The league will call a meeting of hotel representatives in August to discuss smoke elimination and rules and regulations for the firing of furnaces will be put into every home in the city with the aid of local Boy Scouts, according to Johnson.

WASHINGTON, July 22.—Preparations were going forward at the treasury today to authorize manufacture during 1930 of 2,000,000 gallons of bourbon and rye whisky for prescription by licensed physicians for medicinal purposes.

Manufacture of the whisky, the first to be produced since prohibition, is necessary to replenish existing stocks in bonded warehouses which now aggregate 9,549,017 gallons. By next Jan. 1, when the new manufacture will begin, stocks on hand will be reduced by use and evaporation to about 8,500,000 gallons, it was estimated.

This latter figure represents about a five years' supply. The Willis-Campbell act authorizes manufacture of new whisky whenever existing stocks are deemed insufficient by the treasury. As medicinal whisky requires four years aging before use, the treasury feels production must begin soon to allow time for aging.

Reaction of organized druggists to the treasury's announcement was anxiously awaited today.

Spokesmen for dry groups have consistently opposed proposals to start production of new liquor stocks for medicinal purposes.

President Hoover is understood to have approved the treasury's announcement.

Elaborate precautions to guard the six distilleries and warehouses entrusted with manufacture of the new supplies are being taken.
