

BUSINESS MEN CHOOSE YOUNG AS 'GREATEST'

200 Executives Studying at Harvard Place Henry
Ford Second.

By United Press
BOSTON, Aug. 9.—Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric Company and former Boston lawyer, who brought about the recent German reparations agreement, is, in the opinion of 200 prominent business executives studying at the Harvard University Institute of Business, "the greatest business man in America."

The business executives, taking a summer course here, balloted Thursday night on the "one outstanding American business man."

The results were: Owen D. Young, 52 votes; Henry Ford, 42; Andrew Mellon, 16; President Hoover, 10; George F. Baker, 4; J. P. Morgan, 4; Alfred P. Sloan Jr., 3; Walter S. Gifford, 2; Samuel Insull, 2; Charles M. Schwab, 2; Charles G. Dawes, 1; Thomas A. Edison, 1; Colonel Peter B. Knight, 1; Matthew Brush, 1.

Young's selection was based on his achievement in partly reorganizing the finances of many nations.

Ford "earned" his forty-two votes because of "his far-reaching application of the new American philosophy of mass production and the consequent more even distribution of comforts and conveniences."

Mellon's votes were cast "as a compliment for his private and public work," while President Hoover was lauded as the first man to "introduce high-class business methods and ideals in the government and politics of the United States."

The executive students agreed that the most important business during the next five years will be the frequency of mergers of every type.

They predicted that power units will combine their output into vast super-power projects; natural gas pipe lines will be carried eastward to the Alleghenies, railroads, airplane and bus lines will consolidate, and various types of banks will combine into "huge department stores of finance."

Our Old Garbage Can Isn't What It Used to Be

Tired of washing knives and forks? Just stamp your name on them and slip them in the garbage can. They probably will come back washed, as did the heap at the bottom of this picture of a year's accumulation of "what have you" salvaged at the Indianapolis garbage reduction plant.

Disposal Plant Turns Out to Be a Diamond Mine and Jewelry Store.

BY ELDORA FIELD

"What's become of the butter knife—and where's all our knives and forks?"

If you must know, they probably are in company with last night's potato peelings, bumping along in an ill-smelling trailer toward the Indianapolis garbage reduction plant.

But they'll probably come back—washed!

Every month yields treasure at the reduction plant, and we're not speaking in terms of fertilizer either.

Over 3,000 pieces of silver tableware were recovered from the plant last year and returned to erstwhile owners. Hotel and restaurant owners keep in constant touch with the plant.

On Aug. 5, 237 pieces of silver were returned to the Claypool. In another month the following returns were made: To Indianapolis Athletic Club, 60 pieces; White's restaurant, 217; Craig's confectionery, 42, with a commensurate return to other establishments.

Heirlooms Found
But silver is not all that is recovered. Cooking utensils, dishes and innumerable objects impossible to identify, constantly appear. Occasionally, a bit of jewelry, valuable keys and even family heirlooms, have arrived at the plant. Mrs. L. Bowersmith, 1108 West Morris street, recently recovered a valuable pin lost in the garbage.

TANKER BLAST POURS BLAZING OIL IN HARBOR

One Man Killed and Seven Injured in Explosion on Boat.

By United Press
BAYONNE, N. J., Aug. 9.—One man was killed and seven were known to have been injured in a series of explosions aboard the tanker William E. Rockefeller at Pier 6 of the Standard Oil Company today.

The blasts shook Essex county, New Jersey, broke windows along the New Brighton (Staten Island) water front and sent hundreds of persons to their telephones in a panic.

The tanker caught fire and poured blazing oil into the Kill Von Kull. The flames spread across the Kill toward Staten Island, and tugs immediately scouted through the inferno picking up the tanker's crew members from the hissing waters.

The body of the dead man was floating near the tanker. It was taken to the Bayonne morgue.

Men's Bones Broken
The seven injured men, some with broken bones and all of them burned, were picked from the water, rushed ashore at St. George and New Brighton and hurried in ambulances and private cars to Staten Island hospitals.

All seven jumped from the decks when the first explosion was followed by several other blasts and by belching fire in the forward hold. Fifteen minutes after the first concussion, there was a final puff and roar.

Black smoke rolled in palls from the huge tanker at tugs and the New York City fireboat Zophar Mills sped to the scene.

City Is Darkened
The dark billows flattened out and then settled over Staten Island until it became necessary to turn on lights in the stores and homes there.

The tugs, after picking up the bodies, joined the fireboat in efforts to prevent the flames spreading to the pier and adjacent vessels.

They towed the tanker past the St. George ferry terminal and across the harbor to the Red Hook Flats, off Bay Ridge, while the Zophar Mills continued to pour streams of water into the flaming hulk. Thousands of Staten Island commuters bound for Manhattan watched from municipal ferries. Thousands of other residents, their first alarm over, swarmed to the new Brighton shore to see the burning ship.

Old? Huh!

By United Press
NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 9.—The spirit of youth looks a little drab today after the Chamber of Commerce here received a letter from 70-year-old Mrs. Susan Grove, Baltimore, asking that the body sponsor her contemplated trip over Niagara Falls.

"It would be the first thrill of my life," writes Mrs. Grove, who has turned three score and ten. She purposes that she should make the descent in a rubber ball or a barrel.

GIVES UP FOR OHIO MURDER

Man's Conscience Breaks;
Surrenders to Police.

By United Press
NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Joseph Eddleman, 39, surrendered early today to a detective of Bathgate police station, saying he was mixed up in a murder case in Ohio.

Last December, he said, he and one Ed Thompson were robbing the home of a Dr. Silver in Eaton, near Toledo, O. The doctor came home, there was a fight, the doctor was fatally injured and the burglars escaped, he said.

"I have been all over this country," Eddleman said. "I wanted to give myself up, but I never could get up my nerve."

He also said he had served a sentence for stealing an auto in Florida. Police locked him up and telegraphed Eaton authorities. The man stretched out on his bunk. "I'm glad that's over," he said. "Maybe I can sleep now."
