

OLD AMERICAN VILLAGE BEING BUILT BY FORD

Collection of Antiques at Dearborn in Progress for Years.

For week or so a newspaper item has been appearing in addition to Henry Ford's museum of early American life. It is the first of a series of three articles describing the growth of this museum and the old-fashioned village of Dearborn.

BY J. A. PETERSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
DETROIT, Aug. 22.—Reading human history from articles of human origin is the thought and purpose back of the typical American village Henry Ford is building in his home town of Dearborn on the outskirts of Detroit.

And the ability to thus read history is ascribed to Ford in an exceptionally marked degree, despite various references spoken and written in the past with respect to his lack of historical attainment.

Although the auto magnate has demonstrated that he is weak on dates and incidents, the fact is he has quite definite ideas regarding historical values, and his Dearborn collection represents his way of giving expression to the notions he entertains.

"We are trying to assemble," he remarked, "complete series of every kind of article used or made in America from the days of the first settlers down to now."

"When we are through we shall have reproduced American life as lived."

The Ford collections at Dearborn have been in a process of growth for many years. Early in life the passion for accumulating such collections took hold of the Ford mind.

At first he collected articles brought there by his father and mother, then things of little apparent value, pieces of old china, old rusty hand wrought nails and spikes. These are put most carefully away in the museum.

Then there are relics and antiques, many of priceless rarity. Acres of them are protected and preserved in the old tractor plant at Dearborn until they can be classified and put in place in the museum being built near the main Ford administration building in Dearborn.

In the collections are the Wayside Inn near Boston, the Burroughs homestead in the Catskills, the Ford homestead in the Old Scotch settlement of Dearborn and the Botsford Inn in Detroit.

RHODIUS TEAMS ARE CHAMPIONS IN LIFE SAVING

Ringgold Girl Amasses 23 Points to Give Pool Second Place.

Contestants from Rhodius park pool today held the city-wide life saving championship after contests Wednesday afternoon at Rhodius, under auspices of the Indianapolis chapter of the American Red Cross and the board of recreation.

Rhodius entrants captured the events with 48 points while Miss Alma Teifert, of Ringgold pool, amassed 23 points herself to put Ringgold in second place. Seventy-five representatives of city swimming pools competed for medals, awarded to winners in senior and junior divisions.

Rhodius Boy Wins

Norman Hammer, Rhodius, won first place in the senior boys' group, in which Fred Grossart and Jarvis Allen of Warfield were second and third, respectively. The junior boys' event resulted in a tie between Sam Klezmer and Harry Vinstein, both of Rhodius. In the swim-off Klezmer won.

Miss Teifert took high honors in the senior girls' division, with Marian White, Ellenberger, and Ruth West, Rhodius, placing second and third. Miss Jean Showalter, Hoosier Athletic Club, won the junior girls' division; Miss Helen Lee Smith, Ravenswood, was second, and Nancy Baumhofer, Rhodius, third.

Diving Exhibition

Fancy diving stunts were exhibited by Bobby Lile, 9, and Jarvis Allen, city diving champion.

Francis T. Hodges, director of life saving of the Indianapolis chapter of Red Cross, was in charge, assisted by Fred Grossart of the city recreation department. Instruction in life saving will be given at Rhodius pool all next week, beginning at 2 p. m., Monday, Hodges announced.

CITY GIRL OFFERED CONTRACT IN MOVIES

Winner of Magazine Essay Contest Screens Well, Say Critics.

Miss Marion Edwards, daughter of Captain L. B. Edwards, Ft. Benjamin Harrison, today tried to choose between a return to Indianapolis and a movie career.

Miss Edwards, winner of the Curtiss Flying Service (Inc.) Film Fun magazine essay contest on "Why I Want to Fly," is spending ten days in New York as the guest of the magazine, flying daily over the city and surrounding territory.

According to dispatches from New York, she was offered a contract to appear in a George Le Mare comedy, "A Trip to New York," but has been unable to decide whether to accept.

She screens well and has a good talkie voice, according to critics who viewed her screen test.
