

BREAD OUT OF STONES NOW IS CHEMISTS' AIM

Fine Clothes From Trees
Also Near Reality in Laboratories.

BY DR. FRANK THONE
Science Service Staff Writer
MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 9.—Bread from stones and air.

Fine raiment from trees. Gasoline from solid coal. Without the wave of a magician's wand, but with the aid of careful searchings into scientific facts, American chemists are revolutionizing industry, agriculture, and everyday life. Gathering today here for the meeting of the American Chemical society, they are about to tell their colleagues and the world the latest advances of their science. Farm relief probably will be brought about by the chemist more than by the legislator. In the present meeting, government chemists will tell of the success of first steps in a new way of combining air and stones, which eventually will become bread, after being worked over by wheat plants.

A whole section is given over to the cellulose chemists, who rapidly are making it more profitable to grow trees than to cultivate cotton. Here again chemistry ties into the day's news, for the Gastonia labor troubles, which have culminated in the dramatic trial now under way in North Carolina, are due in large part to the rise of Rayon, a purely chemical product.

The super-Zepplins now building for the United States are children of the chemists, from prow to stern. Metallurgical chemists show how aluminum can be stiffened with other metals to make the frame both rigid and light, and even how an entire hull can be constructed from metal sheets to make a "tin airship." A chemist found helium on the sun before it was known on earth, and other chemists now separate it from the natural gas of southwestern wells, in which it occurs as only a small fraction of the total flow. Chemists here this week will tell how they have been cracking their heads to find better ways to crack crude oil and get better aviation and automobile fuel.

BULL FIGHTER CHEERED

Franklin, American Toreador,
Applauded by Madrid Crowd.

By United Press
MADRID, Sept. 9.—Sydney Franklin, American bull fighter, won the applause of a huge Madrid gathering Sunday with his display of daring and coolness.

Franklin, a native of Brooklyn, was cheered greatly for his passing and cape-work, killing his first bull in four thrusts. He displeased his watchers to some extent for his caution in tackling the second bull, a wild, dangerous one. But when he dispatched it in a few passes, he won the crowd over again.

GERMANY LIKES BRIAND SCHEME

Thinks 'U. S. of Europe' Is Economic Answer.

By Frederick Kuh
United Press Staff Correspondent

GENEVA, Sept. 9.—In an important speech before the League assembly today, Gustav Stresemann, the German foreign minister declared himself strongly in favor of Premier Aristide Briand's idea of a "United States of Europe."

Stresemann welcomed the plan of economic unification for the European nations as a necessary solution of the state of chaos and strife to which the continental countries are exposed because of internal and external conditions. He suggested that under Briand's plan of unification, the governments of Europe could adopt a single system of coins and Pan-European postage stamps. Stresemann's declarations in favor of the plan came as a great surprise to many observers who believed few government would swing behind Briand openly on the proposal for fear of arousing the disfavor of the United States. Depending upon America for capital, it was not thought they would enter readily into a combine, the effect of which would be to fight off the progressive invasion of Europe by American commercial interests.

Stresemann's bold declaration was expected to encourage other countries to follow. In response to Premier Briand's invitation, twenty-seven leaders of European governments were prepared today to hear him expound in detail his project for the organization of the states of Europe into an economic union.

SCHNEIDER CUP TEAMS INVITED TO AIR EVENT

French Ask English and Italians to Compete for Trophy.

By United Press

PARIS, Sept. 9.—Pierre Etienne Flandin, president of the Aero Club de France, today officially invited the Italian and English Schneider cup teams to engage in a contest for a magnificent cup to be offered by the club. He proposed the contest be held during the international aviation meet to be held at La Baule, Sept. 15.

Flandin telegraphed the invitation to the air officials of Italy and England, declaring the calm sea at La Baule and the preparations already made there for a monster aviation meet, rendered conditions ideal. Flandin's invitation caused favorable comment in French aviation circles. Enthusiasts declared it would give Italy a chance to put into action special machines which it had been unable to utilize in the Schneider cup competition at Ryde Saturday. The result of the proposed contest at La Baule would not, however, detract from England's victory at Ryde, the experts declared.

By United Press
CALSHOT, Sept. 9.—It was stated

here today that the next Schneider cup race, to take place in 1931 in all probability would be a five-sided contest with England, Italy, France, United States and Germany competing.

It was announced officially here that Squadron Leader A. H. Orelbar, member of the British Schneider cup team, will attempt to set a new world speed record Tuesday. Orelbar will use the super-marine Rolls Royce 8-6 seaplane, in which H. R. D. Waghorn won the Schneider Cup races for England, and expects to achieve a record of 370 miles an hour.

Assassination Attempt Charged

STARTS EXILE TO WILDS, CLAD IN SPECTACLES

N. Y. Business Man Will 'Go Neanderthal' to Test Modern Virility.

By Harry Ferguson
United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—The wilderness of northwestern New Brunswick is about to become the home of a modern caveman who will combine the best features of Robinson Crusoe, Adam and Tarzan of the Apes. Burt M. McConnell, who has become weary of a swivel-chair existence, has yielded to the urge to go Neanderthal and on Wednesday will walk boldly into the wilds, clad only in the latest model of shell-rimmed glasses. He will remain until Thanksgiving for the specific purpose of losing fourteen pounds and proving modern man is no sissy. For a while he probably will be a bit nervous about the trivial matters of food and clothing, McConnell said, but everything will happen for the best as soon as he gets a spear.

"I think a man is perfectly safe anywhere in the world if he has a good spear," said McConnell.

Armed with such a useful weapon and with the aid of his non-breakable spectacles, he will set about the killing of elk to provide skin for a prehistoric business suit and meat for food.

McConnell is going to do some writing—on birch bark with charcoal—and in his spare moments he will look around for the lost French fliers, Nungesser and Coll, who, he believes, landed somewhere in New Brunswick.

The departure was set for today. By Wednesday he will be floating down a river in a canoe with a committee that will certify he did not take an electric toaster, an automatic cigarette lighter or any other of the softening conveniences of modern life into the woods.

There were rumors that the birch bark manuscript would be transformed into a book, and after persistent effort the publicity agent of G. P. Putnam Sons was cornered into admitting his firm would publish the volume and be right happy to do so.
