

ANTI-EXPORT FORCES AHEAD IN POWER FIGHT

Maine's Referendum Shows Victory Is Probable by 10,000 Votes.

By United Press
PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 10.—A margin of victory of from 8,000 to 10,000 votes for the anti-export forces in Maine's power fight was indicated today on the basis of almost complete returns from Monday's referendum.

Defeat of the Smith-Carlton bill, which would have permitted the export of hydro-electric power beyond the borders of the state, will go down in Maine's political history as perhaps the most amazing upset ever registered at the polls.

Return from 582 out of 632 precincts in the state today showed: No—61,999.

Yes—54,947.

Since the unreported precincts were in Aroostook county, known to be a stronghold of the anti-export forces, the margin of victory was expected to reach 8,000 to 10,000.

Conceding defeat, President Walter S. Wyman of the Central Maine Power Company, a leader of the proponents of the Smith-Carlton bill, said:

"The export cause is lost. I am exceedingly sorry for this as I believe sincerely that it would have been a great help to the state of Maine."

As was expected, rural Maine recorded itself almost 100 per cent opposed to the export plan. Failure of the industrial centers to pile up a sufficient lead to offset the vote of the country districts resulted in the downfall of the Smith-Carlton bill. Opponents of the Smith-Carlton bill claimed that backers of the measure spent something like $1,000,000 in the futile campaign to secure its adoption. Handicapped by a lack of funds, the anti-export forces, headed by Dr. Ernest Gruening, editor of the Portland Evening News, had entertained slight hope of success. They announced they had spent only about $1,100 in their campaign to defeat the bill.

NABBED WITH BRIDE OF ONLY ONE WEEK

Honeymooner, Arrested for Forgery, Is Alleged Bigamist.

By United Press
NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Arthur Joachim, 43, was arrested here while spending a honeymoon with a bride of one week, Sarah Poland, 40, said to have been a wealthy resident of Schenectady.

According to the police, Joachim had a habit of marrying wealthy women, and after staying with them a short time, departing with as much of their fortune as he could get. They asserted that in Cleveland he performed this trick, and that in Philadelphia he did a similar one, marrying a Mrs. Mae McNamee and disappearing with $11,000 of her money during the honeymoon. The police say Joachim has another wife in Fall River, Mass., and a 15-year-old son, but he says he was divorced from her.

Joachim's arrest here was made on a charge of forgery preferred by Edward A. Strube, a merchant of Albany, who said Joachim gave him a worthless check for $300. The police also are communicating with Cleveland and Philadelphia to see if Joachim is wanted on charges there.

WELDING PROCESS NEW

Scientists at Cleveland Sessions Hear of Electrical Method.

By United Press
CLEVELAND, Sept. 10.—A new process of welding which may revolutionize the manufacture of transportation vehicles, and three new products from German laboratories, today held the attention of 6,000 scientists and engineers attending the eleventh annual National Metal Congress and National Metal Exposition here this week.

The new process, termed the carbo-flux process, is said to make possible the welding of aluminum and super-strength alloys by means of electrical heat, twice as fast as with a gas torch, and cheaper than with oxy-acetylene.

CANDIDATES' VIEWS TO BE SOUGHT ON GAS CO. PURCHASE

Slack Plans to Question Aspirants to Post of Commission.

By EDWIN V. O'NEEL

Attitude of candidates for city manager commissioners, on the city's plan to take over the properties of the Citizens Gas Company, will be sought by Mayor L. Ert Slack.

Slack, who started the machinery for acquiring the utility in accordance with the 1905 franchise, today made known his intentions to inquire into the status of those seeking berths on the city commission which will replace the city council in January.

"I'm interested in knowing what individuals think about the municipality operating the gas plant," Slack said.

Opinions Not Expressed

William H. Insley, gas company director, and Leo R. Welch, son of John R. Welch, president of gas company's board of directors, are on the city manager ticket, endorsed by the Indianapolis City Manager League, but have not expressed their views on the gas question. The utility transfer to the city has been postponed pending disposal of litigation in federal court.

"There's no reason for me to take part in the fall campaign for commissioners," Slack said. "I'm going right on running the city and attending to my own business."

"I've no comment to make except that I'm not a candidate for city manager, have not been and won't be. I don't think any one has any business trying to get that post. That is not the way the city manager government was designed to operate.

No Organization Planned

"I still favor the city manager form of government. It ought to be tried here for at least four years. We should go right ahead cleaning up things. But that doesn't mean I'm endorsing any ticket."

"I think it would be a shame to let the city administration fall back into the politicians' hands. The city hall will not organize and take part in the fall election. Some of us might agree on certain individuals as candidates but I don't think the city hall could be organized to back a slate. I doubt if the Democratic party could be organized."

WARD WORKERS ARE ENTERTAINED AT TEA

Ward organizers and candidates will meet Sept. 17 at the Lincoln to discuss the Nov. 5 election campaign.

BRIAND'S PLAN FAILS TO MAKE MUCH HEADWAY

'U. S. of Europe' Proposal Merely Launches New Catchwords.

By FREDERICK KUH
United Press Staff Correspondent
GENEVA, Sept. 10.—League circles expressed the opinion today that Premier Aristide Briand in proposing the formation of the "United States of Europe" has done nothing more than to launch new catchwords.

At Monday's luncheon to twenty-eight leaders of European governments, he confined himself to a sketchy outline of the plan and, because he added little or nothing to his previous statements on the subject, most of the delegates were left in the dark as to the exact form the proposed federation was to take. As a gesture toward the pacification of the nationalistic rivalries now rampant in Europe, the plan had, of course, some value, it was felt.

Just Diplomatic Phrase

But many of the delegates were of the opinion that nationalist tendencies in themselves would prevent the scheme from gaining much headway. The opinion privately expressed by some of the leading statesmen was that for many years the "United States of Europe" would be nothing more than a diplomatic phrase.

Even Gustav Stresemann, the German foreign minister, who openly supported the plan in a speech to the assembly, was said to have intimated later in the day that the idea could not be realized in the political field and was approachable in the economic field only in so far as it avoided the slightest collision with the interests of the United States of America.

Stresemann was not only aware of the $4,000,000,000 which America has invested in Germany in the last four years, but he also realized Germany's dependence on American capital was destined to continue for many years.

Voices Views With Candor

During the course of the luncheon at which Briand discussed the plan, Arthur Henderson, the British secretary of foreign affairs, voiced his views on the subject with great candor.

While he declared the conception of a United States of Europe was excellent, he could not quite understand how the sovereignty of nations within the federation would be safeguarded.

It is understood that he raised the question whether the federation would not produce prosperity for several of the European countries at the expense of others, thus causing harm to the working classes in certain sections of the continent.

First Candidate Files

LISTS OPENED TO CANDIDATES

Election Board Begins to Accept Petitions.

City manager election commissioners today began receiving petitions of prospective candidates for city commissioners in the Nov. 5 election.

Decision to receive the petitions so the names can be certified to the election board before Oct. 5, as required by law, was reached at a session of election commissioners, William H. Remy, and Reginald Sullivan and City Clerk William A. Boyce Jr., late Monday.

Herman F. Rihkoff, former police chief, was the first to file a petition. Commissioners decided the supreme court's ruling on constitutionality of the city manager law might come at such a late date it would prevent certification of names.

Clifford A. Keane, candidate for city councilman last spring, was plaintiff in suits to test validity of the manager law, seeking to compel the election board to hold the election under the federal form of government.

Boyce is required by law to check the names and certify more than 961 citizens who have signed each prospective candidates petition.

CORNSTALK IS FUEL PROVIDER

Production of New Gas, Reported by Chemists.

By United Press
MINNEAPOLIS, Sept. 10.—The lowly cornstalk, which youth still fashions into fiddles, assumed a new importance today as the source of a cornstalk gas capable of providing heat, light, power, and refrigeration on a commercial scale.

Experiments covering the production of the new gaseous fuel were reported to the seventy-eighth American Chemical Society convention by Professors A. M. Buswell and C. S. Boruff of the University of Illinois.

Production of the gaseous fuel also would cut much of the cost from the manufacture of cornstalk paper and partly eliminate the deadly corn borer, the professors said.

Comparatively simple apparatus would be required, the chemists said—a small cylindrical tank, a supply of dried cornstalks—and the average farmer would have enough gas to cook his meals, heat his home, charge his electric storage plant, operate his gas engines and provide his freezer with dry ice.

Would you match your housecleaning against hers?

Would you be willing to enter into a housecleaning contest with a woman who has a Hoover?

Her first advantage over you would be in the ease with which she cleaned her floor coverings—for The Hoover requires less human energy to operate than any other cleaner. Her second advantage would be the speed—for The Hoover removes more dirt per minute than any other cleaner. Her third advantage would be in thoroughness.
