

REPORTED SPLIT IN RUMANIA IS DENIED FLATLY

Paris Legation Labels
Rumor as 'Untrue.' Says
Other Story Is 'Fable.'

PARIS, Nov. 4.—The reported split in the Rumanian royal family, said to have been climaxed by the virtual ejection of Queen Marie from her suite in the royal palace, was denied officially by the Rumanian legation here today.

The legation statement denied that Marie and her daughter-in-law, Princess Helene, mother of the boy King Michael, had been estranged or that Marie had broken with the government after her recent interview, attacking Premier Julius Maniu over his refusal to grant her the place on the regency made vacant by the death of George Brudugan.

"Nothing is more untrue," the statement said. "The queen is on particularly good terms with the government and especially with Princess Helene, who came herself to wish a happy birthday to the queen."

The legation also denied a report that Marie's courier had been assassinated, saying the story was a "fable."

GENE HOWE SNEERS
AT RATTLER STORY

Launches "Debunking" Campaign at Magazine Writer.

AMARILLO, Texas, Nov. 4.—Gene Howe, Amarillo editor, who gained national fame for his criticisms of Mary Garden and Colonel Charles Lindbergh, has launched a new "debunking" campaign—this one aimed at the author of a snake story.

Owen P. White, writing in Collier's magazine, said a collier rallied followed the point of a gun aimed at it so closely that you could not miss its head if you shot at it.

Howe experimented. Try as he would, he could not shoot the snake in the head, at least, until he had hit it many times in other places.

"It is such bunk as this that is making the development of common sense in this country slow," said Howe in his newspaper column.

"A campaign against bunk, whether it has to do with snakes, or with grand opera in small cities, is needed."

AIRPLANES USED TO SHIP FAWNS

Deer Are Carried Across
Grand Canyon in Air.

By Science Service
GRAND CANYON, Ariz., Nov. 4.—Airplanes are being used in restocking the south rim of the Grand Canyon with deer from the famous Kaibab herd on the north rim.

Eight fawns were transported by airplane from Fredonia, Ariz., on the north side of the Grand Canyon to Red Butte, ninety-five miles away, on the south side. They had been brought the sixteen miles from Pipe Springs to Fredonia by truck and completed the seventeen miles from Red Butte to Grand Canyon village by the same mode of travel.

Their combined air and truck journey was made in exactly three hours, whereas their predecessors of the last two or three years, who made the entire trip by truck, had to travel 240 miles and were twenty-four to thirty hours on the road.

The new arrivals showed no ill effects from their pioneer air flight.

The young deer were carried across the canyon in one of the Ford tri-motor airships, in which the Scenic Airways Company has been carrying passengers on sightseeing trips over the Grand Canyon during the last two summers. The seats were removed from the cabin of the plane to make room for the fawns, which had been placed in specially made individual crates.

Howe experimented. Try as he would, he could not shoot the snake in the head, at least, until he had hit it many times in other places.

"It is such bunk as this that is making the development of common sense in this country slow," said Howe in his newspaper column.

"A campaign against bunk, whether it has to do with snakes, or with grand opera in small cities, is needed."
