

ANNIVERSARY OF SICKNESS FINDS GEORGE V WELL

Seriousness of Condition Was Withheld From Worried Subjects.

By United Press
LONDON, Nov. 22.—A year ago today, newspapers sold like hot cakes, cables flashed from one end of the earth to the other, and the world was distressed to learn that King George V of England was seriously ill.

The news of his illness was contained in an official bulletin issued from Buckingham Palace and signed by two doctors, which was issued on the night of Nov. 21, 1928, and appeared in the press the following morning.

Up to that time all the world knew was that the king had contracted a slight cold by standing bareheaded in the rain during the Armistice day ceremonies at the Cenotaph, Nov. 11. The bulletin revealed that this cold had developed into bronchial pneumonia, and from then on for many months everybody watched his struggle with bated breath.

Opinion holds that but for the undulating attention of the eleven doctors, summoned to the king's bedside, he would not, at his age, have survived the illness.

The crisis came during the Christmas week, when all feared that the festivities would be marred by the sickness of the empire's ruler. It was on the express wish of the royal family that bulletins of a more favorable character were issued to allow the public to enjoy the Christmas holiday with more relieved minds.

This was not so at Buckingham Palace, where at least once during that week Queen Mary and her children awaited all night the dread summons to the king's bedside.

With the new year, the king took on a new lease of life. Soon, he was able to be moved to Craigwall House, near Bognor, and, as he regained his strength, to Windsor castle and from there after a short stay to London, to Sandringham, where he is today.

Competent authorities believe that King George now is almost as fit as he was just before his illness.

MARRIES INTO KINGSHIP

New Pagan Drama Among Cannibals Includes Swedish Sailor.

By United Press
STOCKHOLM, Nov. 22.—Wrecked off the coast of New Guinea, some thirty years ago, Karl Pettersson, Swedish sailor, was picked up by a savage tribe. He was to be killed, but the daughter of the cannibal chief fell in love with him and married him.

He soon became king of the island and after his wife's death returned to Sweden and married again. He has taken his second wife back to his island kingdom.

The match was invented 102 years ago.

Denies Guilt

EXPERTS TOUR TO FIND GALES

Weather Bureau on Wheels Travels Plane Route.

By Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance
WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—A weather bureau and radio station on an auto truck, the property of Boeing Air Transport, is spending the winter roaming around the west looking for storms.

This winter excursion is for the purpose of locating weather observation stations along Boeing's Chicago-San Francisco airway, and to make a general study of winter storms in the area.

The truck is spending the winter between Omaha and Cheyenne. It will look for storms and weather bureau sites for fifty miles or so on either side of the airway.

Next spring, when passenger service in tri-motored planes is started over this longest of America's airways, there will be constant weather service, not only along the entire line of flight, but on each side as well. Storms will be spotted and reported long before they reach the airway.

There are seven men with this mobile weather bureau and radio station. They include two weather men, a radio operator, and four former navy men with radio experience.

This is believed the first time in the history of meteorology that complete stations on wheels have been sent out. The auto truck method allows for mobility in case the weather station sites tested do not prove satisfactory.

HOTEL OBJECTS TO SPY GLASS 'PEEPERS'

Women Guests Lodge Complaints Against Office Workers.

DETROIT, Nov. 22.—The management of the exclusive Barlum hotel here doesn't mind "peeping Toms" in nearby office buildings so much, but when they use field glasses, then something really should be done about it.

According to a letter sent to Commissioner D. C. Groebel of the city water works by the hotel management, the spy glass situation in the water works building across an alley from the hotel has become "unbearable."

"Our women guests are complaining vigorously," said the letter. "Something must be done immediately."

Groebel said he would look into the situation.
