

ROYAL ROMANCE BLOSSOMED ON BEACH AT LIDO

Humbert Prince Charming to Marie Jose in School Days.

Editor's note: The author of the following article was the most intimate school chum of Princess Marie Jose of Belgium when she attended the Santissima Annunziata school for girls near Florence, Italy. Because of this intimate friendship, Signora Clara Rocca admirably is adapted to write reminiscences of the Princess' first meeting with Crown Prince Humbert of Italy, whom she is to marry in January.

School chum of the Princess Marie Jose

ROME, Dec. 2.—Destiny chose Princess Marie Jose of Belgium, to be the bride of Crown Prince Humbert and the potential future queen of Italy.

He first entered her life like a girl's fairy prince. He was the Prince Charming of her childish dreams. They first met at Lido, in Venice, when he was 14 and she was 12, and their romance may be said to have started almost from childhood.

It was fateful that Princess Marie Jose was to come to school in Italy. I remember the first day she entered and the commotion it created among the girls.

Tall and slender
When the princess came, we were greatly impressed. Tall and slender and beautiful, with a mass of golden hair encircling her fairy-like face, she might have been Titania as a child with a bright crown on her head and a shining wand in her hand. But she was shy and as embarrassed as we were.

We went to the garden, but no one dared to speak to her; we just gazed in awe and admiration. Obviously, she wanted to play and she was the first to propose a game of hide-and-seek. Then the ice was broken and we started playing.

When she was hiding with one of the girls, under a bush at the end of the garden, she quickly made friends and declared that she wanted to dye her delicate beige shoes with iodine to make them black like ours.

Wanted Same Dress
Our grey uniforms were far from elegant, with their white pleated and starched collars and black woolen aprons, but they struck her eye, and she was impatient to have one herself, and especially to wear black shoes and stockings like the rest of us.

Princess Marie Jose learned Italian rapidly and soon even could compose poetry. She was very intelligent and of an artistic temperament. She loved painting and music above all.

We were told to call her "mademoiselle" but she would not have it. She wanted to be like other girls and chose to be called by her Christian name in Italian, "Maria Giuseppe."

One of her favorite sports was basketball and, since she was very tall, she hardly ever missed her aim. She blushed when the other girls applauded her. She danced perfectly and liked gymnastics.

Search Arctic for Eielson

Here's one of the best pictures ever taken of Carl Ben Eielson, famous Alaskan pilot, for whom a thrilling search has been under way since his plane disappeared while flying to the relief of the Nanuk, a fur-trader's ship trapped in the ice off the Siberian coast. Recent reports that smoke from a camp fire had been seen in the Arctic wilderness revived hopes that he was still alive. Eielson won fame when he flew from Alaska to Spitzbergen with Sir George Hubert Wilkins.

FIVE DROWN IN NEWFOUNDLAND COAST STORMS

More Disasters From Gales
Feared by Marine Authorities.

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, Dec. 2.—A succession of gales and snow storms off the coast of Newfoundland left a known toll of five dead today, with several schooners overdue and unreported.

Five men, who set out in a pilot boat to place a pilot aboard a steamer, lying off the narrows from here, were drowned when their craft overturned.

The steamer Hofelstein accomplished two rescues during the height of the storm. The first rescue was that of the crew of the schooner George K, bound for Westville, which lost its canvas and was sinking 180 miles east of St. Johns.

Later, the Hofelstein rescued the crew of nine men from the schooner Catherine B, 150 miles east of here. Three other schooners were overdue and had not reported for twenty-four hours. Marine authorities feared the gale might have caused several more disasters, with additional loss of life.
