

STRESSES DUTY OF CLUBWOMAN TO COMMUNITY

New Head of Federation Cites Responsibility to Members.

DENVER, June 13.—The responsibility of club women to the community and nation was stressed here today by Mrs. John F. Sippel of Baltimore in her presidential address to delegates attending the biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

"We can not be reminded too often that our power to give to the nation is measured largely by the contributions of the local club to the community life," Mrs. Sippel said.

"I would press this sense of responsibility further back, through the club to the individual member and lay the emphasis of responsibility for community welfare on the individual working through the club."

Influence of Destiny

"It is the average men and women who are the tides and trade current which influence the destiny of nations."

Mrs. Sippel urged the delegates to draw inspiration from the prominent women of today and of the past for the part they must play in their community life.

The federation president reviewed briefly some of the activities of the various state organizations—activities that ranged from the purchase of a light plant for a town by club women to caring for crippled children.

Cites Responsibility

"As we frankly face our responsibilities, we must measure them, now as ever, by our power," Mrs. Sippel said. "I ask you, then, to consider the magnitude of the woman power of our time. It far transcends our realization."

Mrs. Sippel explained how the demands of women in the matter of dress possibly could bring great change to industry.

"It is vital that we realize that the influence which we exert silently—unintentionally—may be transformed into service of inestimable value to the community, advancing women to positions of leadership, making possible in countless ways better communities and a larger measure of the good things of life for a large number of citizens of all communities," she said.

She said she believed the club women should direct their power toward the improvement of motion pictures and radio programs and the solution of prison administration problems.

WITCHES STILL HEARD AROUND FRENCH TOWN

Woman Is Accused of Using Black Magic on Another.

PARIS, June 13.—Witches still are things to conjure with in France. A short time ago a farmer's wife in the village of Cornet, near Lille, was injured in an accident.

The village postman, in odd hours a bonesetter, warned the good woman that the first woman to visit her the next day would be the witch who had placed her under her evil spell.

A Mme. Wallart called in the capacity of a solicitous neighbor, and has since been asked to leave town. Instead she will sue, providing she can find a lawyer.

HUGE STORE OF WINES PUZZLE TO GOVERNMENT

133,000 Gallons of Choice Vintages Confiscated in California Raid.

By United Press
SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 13.—Locked and carefully guarded in a huge winery not far from Sacramento are choice wines for which California is famed.

Port, sherry, claret, muscatel—every kind of vintage made in the state is found there, a total of 113,000 gallons.

Silva Bros., owners of the place, were arrested six months ago and charged with violating the Volstead act by selling small quantities of the wines to thirsty customers. A bonded winery, the establishment was seized by the government and placed under lock and seal.

Now, for the first time in history of prohibition, the government must make a declaration of policy on the question of selling liquor which has been seized.

Question Is Baffling

With in the next two weeks the case of the United States vs. Silva Brothers' Winery will come up in federal court here. The question is: Shall more than $1,000,000 of the finest wines in California be poured down a sewer, or can the government sell these 133,000 gallons for legitimate commercial use?

First, of course, must come conviction of the owners for violating the national prohibition act. There is no legal problem involved here, and should the Silvas be convicted, the government will focus attention on the winery and its contents.

case of forfeiture and destruction of the wine and the plant.

Here is where the legal battle will begin.

The government has destroyed many gallons of intoxicating beverages since prohibition went into effect. It has confiscated small quantities of choice liquors and turned them over to government hospitals for use.

But never has it been confronted with disposition of such a tremendous quantity of the highest quality liquor.

Creating even more of a legal tangle, Fruit Industries, Inc., a corporation licensed by the government to make by-products from grapes.

had the Silva winery under option before the plant was seized.

They are insisting that the government proceed with the sale, contending that their option still is valid. The property is not made illegal through an act of those owning it, is their argument.

Meantime, both sides are poring over law books, endeavoring to discover proper points of law for the case.

Fruit industries assert that there is nothing in the Volstead act to force destruction of the wine under conditions existing.

The government, it is understood,

is inclined to agree, but is searching for a more careful interpretation of the law.
