

DICTATORS OF EUROPE GAINING NEW STRENGTH

Portugal Latest in Line of One-Man Rule; Others More Powerful.

BY RICHARD D. MILLAN
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The sway of the dictator in Europe, instead of declining, is spreading, and growing more powerful.

Students of international politics point to the announcement that Portugal may be considered to have slipped definitely into line with other nations of the old world which are governed by the iron rule of an individual.

General Carmona, for years the energetic, military-minded president of Portugal, entered the ranks of the dictators when he announced the revolutionary plots which have so frequently shaken Portugal.

Ideas Like Spanish Group
This will be a dictatorship supported by a political group with ideas largely resembling those of neighboring Spain, where one-man rule already has existed for nearly a decade.

Portugal has had eighteen revolutions in as many years.

When General Primo de Rivera, the strong man of Spain, died in Paris about six months ago while on vacation, certain circles believed his passing would mark the breach in the bulwarks of one-man rule in Europe. Then General Berenguer came to imitate the dead statesman and has remained firmly at the helm, despite predictions on all sides that he would not last long.

In Poland, Pilsudski, the nation's "man of iron," has come back again to power after a brief eclipse.

Dictators Riding High
The king-dictator of Yugoslavia, Alexander, continues doing his job apparently to the satisfaction of his subjects.

The self-crowned monarch of Albania, Zogu, previously the national dictator, remains firm in his exalted political seat, supported and comforted by the strong-man tactics of his near-neighbour Signor Mussolini, whose regime goes on despite the daily rumor of flight or assassination.

Further east, Mustapha Kemal likewise is in the saddle, modernizing Turkey gradually but fundamentally.

LONDON DAILY PRINTS

NEWS IN LARGE VAN

Radio, Rolling Press Permit Rapid Delivery of Late Items.

By United Press

LONDON, Sept. 10.—Something new to Londoners in the way of fast delivery of late news to readers has been accomplished by the London evening newspaper, the Star, which regularly is operating a "stop press" printing establishment in its largest delivery van.

The equipment comprises a complete composing frame and type cases, and a suction-fed Bush printing machine capable of printing anything up to three thirty-line news items at a speed up to 10,000 copies an hour.

News items are received by radio from the offices of the Star and are set up and run off in the so-called blank "fudge column" as fast as they are received. The printing can be done as the van is rushing deliveries to the more distant suburbs, but it is more customary to install the van outside horse races, football, or other sports meetings, enabling the spectators at the meeting breaks up to buy London papers with the very last-second news in them.

HOBO HONORED IN DEATH BY POLICE FORCE

Seeking Job; Killed Under Train Trying to Rush to Penniless Family.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Herman Eller, 26, who rode into Chicago six weeks ago as a hobo, will leave the city in state. He is dead. Eight policemen will pay his fare home.

Out of work and money, Eller left his wife and four children in Cheyenne, Wyo., a month and a half ago and came here on a freight train. He looked for work, but found only promises.

Last Saturday he received a letter. His hands trembled as he finished reading it. He ran several blocks to a railway right-of-way. Excited and unnerved, he attempted to board the first train that passed going west. It was a fast train.

A Brookfield policeman found Eller, crushed and broken, on the right-of-way.

In the man's pocket Chief Edward O'Connor of the suburban force found the letter.

It was from Eller's wife. It said the authorities were going to send her and the children to the county home, and that rather than go she would kill the children and herself.

There are only eight men on the Brookfield force, but they raised $20 quickly and sent it to Mrs. Eller. As she received it Tuesday her husband died.

Now the police are going to pay Eller's way back home.

Left Him Cold

Paris Hop Joke May Have Been Funny, but Not to Coste Manager.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Dieudonne Coste and Colonel Lindbergh may assume a perfect pose of nonchalance at the prospect of an ocean flight, but to Rene Racover, Coste's American manager, the possibility of a trip to Paris by air is no joke.

Racover revelled this when he landed at Valley Stream, L. I., after a hop from Washington. Some of the staff at the field noted that Racover was pale and apparently shaken.

Then Marcel Doret, Racover's pilot confessed that he was "having a little fun" at Racover's expense.

When the Lockheed ship left Newark Tuesday for Long Island after accompanying Coste and Bellonte from Washington, Doret pointed the craft in the general direction of Paris.

Reaching the Atlantic, Doret motioned to Racover that they were now Paris bound.

Racover, according to Doret, didn't relish the idea. After explaining that he was lacking in wardrobe and other essentials, he finally prevailed upon Doret to turn back.
