

COMBINATIONS FEATURE CHIC FOOTWEAR FOR AUTUMN

Kid Blended
With Suede
Is PopularBY JULIA BLANSHARD
NEA Service Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—Successful business or professional women should watch their steps this year! New shoes are as different from last year's as the new hats are from the old.

Chic by the foot comes in pairs of materials this autumn, especially in shoes designed to suit the meticulous professional or business woman.

Suede combines with glazed kid, calfskin with lizard, baby alligator with buckskin, python with suede, patent leather with dull kid, or in some other smart way a couple of leathers prove that there is style in union.

The second noticeable new note in footwear is the color that flaunts itself beneath longer gowns. Rust and wine reds, deep, soft greens, blues in many hues, browns of varied tints, and grape purples abound.

Black Still Good

Not that the all black shoe is out. It is excellent, but only for wear with the black costume or one that calls for black accessories.

Third, listing the salient style features, the dressmaker shoe is the accepted mode, with intricate designs, all finished and fitted with impeccable workmanship. The result is a sleek, graceful shoe.

Fourth, for the busy careerist, the tailored shoe runs to oxfords, high-cut pumps that grip and support the foot without tiring it, and a new type of pump that has the saddle of a sports shoe, furnishing a maximum of comfort with grace de luxe.

Heel Height Important

The height of heels is important this year. There are new high-low leather heels that are extremely comfortable.

Covered heels are good too now, with dainty new oxfords, and they come in heights to suit any taste.

Since the height of heels not only makes or mars comfort, but has much to do with a woman's posture, the woman of common sense will learn which heights give her a proper walk and which tilt her and stick to the chosen heel.

Many shoes this year have intricate cut and firm trim, such as pipings, stitchings and decorative saddles.

But all this trim should be felt rather than seen, giving a richness to footwear, but no fussiness. The elaborate shoe that gives the impression of being merely very well planned and executed is the one to step into.

Different Colors Shown

Among the new shoes designed to give a smart understanding to the autumn suits and ensembles are several pairs of different colors that are typical of diversified styles along the same lines.

There is a trim oxford, in navy blue buckskin, with a delicate braid trim of navy blue and white kid which outlines the vamp and outlines the flap on a purse of matching material.

This has the leather heel, silk shoestring and fits in a manner to support a woman nobly through a hard day.

A second choice for autumn is a brown pump, made high and well-fitted, of brown calfskin and brown suede, with a saddle of the calfskin that laces like an oxford. It, too, is an excellent office choice, especially good with the new woolen frocks.

Green Is Attractive

For the woman who wears green with distinction and has chosen it for the winter's wear, there is a green suede and calfskin pump, made with a calfskin buckle stitched for decoration which gives a richness, but no ornamentation.

For the woman who likes wine reds, there is the new type of suede shoe, made with lacings of pearl luster kid woven in and out, in a little bowknot design or straight lines.

With red shoes they may be tan and ruby, with green, emerald and lighter green.

They twinkle and bling like gems as the light strikes them, giving a decorative note to footwear that is pleasing, coming from under the longer skirts.

Infatuation
Is Confused
With Love

BY MARTHA LEE.

One of the very good reasons why the very young should delay matrimony as long as possible is because it is so easy to mistake being in love with love for being in love with an individual.

And despite their similarity, which makes identification difficult, they are different, the most important point being that one has a chance of wearing well, whereas the other can not possibly hold up under the severe wear and tear of marriage.

When young men in love (aged 19 or so) run off and marry young women, whom at the time they believe to be all that is divine, the chances are very slim that happiness will last more than a couple of years.

Reaction Is Same

Being in love with love has all the aspects of the real article. The reaction is the same, the symptoms and all the rest. And if some likely looking girl happens into the picture, she's elected as the object of adoration.

A girl, at the romantic idealistic age, may see a boy who looks so much like Rudy Vallee she just can't resist him and there she is, she thinks, hopelessly in love.

As a matter of fact she has confused the idea of being in love with the fact that she is in love with a person. The fallacy is discovered eventually, but in the meantime, if the worst occurs and the youngsters marry, disillusionment is much harder and much more painful.

Realizes What Love Is

The modern idea is to erase as quickly as possible any mistake as soon as it is discovered. When the mistake mutually is agreed upon it is not so bad. But when the error is only on one side of the books, the fairness of the procedure, becomes something to reckon with.

Dear Miss Lee—I am 21 and have been married three years. When I was 19 I met a boy, thought I was head over heels in love and ran away and married him.

Since that time, I have found I was not in love with the boy at all. That I, like a lot of other young girls and boys, was in love with love.

I have stood it as long as I can. I am so young and I feel I have a right to true love. I have met a man and now I realize what real love is. Although we have never talked about it, I guess my husband is not sorry we married so young. He seems happy and contented and certainly seems to love me.

But I think it would be better, since I do not really love him, to leave him than it would be to go on this way. We have a little girl aged 2. What do you think would be best for me to do? Leave, since I feel the way I do, and seek happiness for myself and perhaps give my husband a chance to find it, or stay and be miserable and eventually have my husband discover I do not love him?

You should have thought before you ran away and married this boy that you were pretty young to assume the responsibilities of wifehood and motherhood. You should have taken into consideration the fact that perhaps you would long for some play days in a few years.

Possesses Understanding

If you were in love with love, when you married your husband, not your husband himself, how can you be sure the case this time is not the same. Chances are it is, because you have all the trimmings right now to make a hopeless romanticist.

Turn the spotlight upon yourself. Investigate thoroughly your capability for stability and depth. And stop dramatizing yourself. If you did leave your husband to marry this man, do you think he would marry you? Don't be silly.

Times are hard and jobs are scarce and no man is going to take the responsibility of another man's child. Especially when the woman for whom he is taking it has not proved in any way she is worthy or appreciative of anything.
