

GEN. PANGALOS HELD AS GREEK REVOLT CHIEF

Government Leaders Say Ex-Dictator Sought to Regain Power.

By United Press
ATHENS, Oct. 31.—Arrest of General Theodoros Pangalos, former dictator, and of thirty of his followers, was believed to have checked what authorities call an attempt to overthrow the Greek government today.

General Pangalos was arrested Thursday while Premier Eleutherios Venizelos was in Ankara for the signing of accords of friendship and naval parity between Greece and Turkey.

Officials said that General Pangalos and his colleagues took advantage of the absence of the premier to push their plan for the overthrow of his government.

The friendship of Venizelos for Turkey was believed to have been the excuse of the Pangalos faction for its alleged attempt to seize power.

Supporters of the former dictator appeared encouraged by a slight public reaction against the policy of Greco-Turkish rapprochement.

General Pangalos dissolved the national assembly and expelled his predecessors in the Greek government when he became dictator of the country in an armed coup in September, 1925.

He announced that he would give Greece a "pure administration" and hold elections for a new general assembly, but after no elections had been called during several months of his dictatorship, he was overthrown by an armed revolt and fled from Greece.

CRIME SWEEPS EUROPE, IN GRIP OF HARD TIMES

Lawlessness Wave Has No Parallel in Recent Years, Say Police.

By United Press
LONDON, Oct. 31.—A crime wave, which police officials say has no parallel in recent years, is sweeping England and the continent in the wake of the economic depression.

Unemployment, bankruptcy, and the collapse of banks and private firms have brought great disregard of law and order.

Twelve murders remain unsolved on the blotter of Scotland Yard. A few weeks ago there were seldom more than two or three murders under investigation at any time. Most of the recent murders have been particularly brutal and have had robbery as the motive, showing the extremes to which people have gone to obtain money.

England was startled a few weeks ago by the first bombing attempt in many years. Four postal workers were injured when the bomb exploded prematurely in a van at the central post office in London. The van contained mail for Buckingham palace, the government offices in Whitehall and the homes of prominent Englishmen.

Another sensational feature of the economic stringency in England has been the large number of suicides and death-pacts.

On the continent the wave of lawlessness has culminated in a revolution against parliamentary government. Six million Germans voted for the Fascists party in the general election knowing the Fascists were opposed to the Republican constitution.

Political murders and anti-Jewish outbreaks, such as have always occurred in Europe in times of economic unrest, have followed the election.

Pressure upon business houses and banks, as in England, has been the cause of many suicides.

The fall in the value of the peseta has been accompanied in Spain by strikes and general lawlessness.

Barcelona the struggle between two big secret unions has been similar in many ways to gang warfare. Men have been "put on the spot" and "taken for a ride" and police have been attacked in the streets.
