Counsel for Accused Demands Retraction from State Senator.

By Times Special
GARY, Ind., Dec. 13.—Death here of Miss Arlene Draves, 19, in the course of a liquor party, has started a side controversy over liquor violations and prohibition, resulting in demand from Robert H. Moore, Gary attorney, and counsel for five men held on murder charges in the case, that C. Oliver Holmes, state senator, make a retraction of a statement.

The senator, in replying to a request of Mrs. Elizabeth Stanley, president of the W. C. T. U., who demanded that prohibition be abolished of blame in the tragedy, told her that what defense attorneys have to say need not be given special consideration and blamed them for what he termed "a wrong impression" of the case.

Moore, declaring he has voted dry, concludes a letter to Holmes as follows:

"I believe in law enforcement; I believe in temperance; I believe America is sicker sober than drunk. But I am also one of the many who believe that the eighteenth amendment has raised havoc with our young manhood and womanhood."

Police Censor for Shows
Following a complaint by a committee of the Gary Lions Club regarding burlesque shows here, another aftermath of the Draves tragedy, Police Chief Stanley Buckland has been appointed by the board of safety as a censor of such shows.

In the meantime, representatives of fifteen young people's societies, with a membership of nearly 500, affiliated with Gary Protestant churches, have been asked to survey of theaters, and promised a report to authorities.

BULLET CHANGES MIND

Man Seeking Reconciliation With Wife Leaves Hastily After Shot.

By Times Special
ANDERSON, Ind., Dec. 13.—Clyde Hopkins, Negro, called at the residence of his wife Melvina, in an effort to effect a reconciliation, but he didn't stay long.

An argument through a door, which Mrs. Hopkins refused to open, was followed by a shot from the inside of the house, and Hopkins fled, a bullet having missed him by a few inches.

Police caught the Negro several blocks from the residence, too frightened at first to give a coherent account of what happened. He will be held until Judge Lawrence V. Mays is ready to hear the prisoner explain why he called on his wife in violation of a court order.

SCIENCE DEEDS LAUDED

Graduate Dean of I. U. Cites Advancement of Modern Times.

By Times Special
BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Dec. 13.—Most of the scientific advances of the modern world are fundamentally the work of the universities and its students, said Dean Ferdinand Payne of the Indiana university graduate school in the president's address here before the Phi Beta Kappa society.

"Because of this fact," said Dean Payne, "the universities have been and should continue to be the home of pure science. Further, it should be emphasized that they are the only source of supply for trained research workers, either in industry or in the universities themselves."

Dean Payne contrasted the simple life of a few generations ago with the advantages of today, and declared that "all inventions are based upon research in pure science."

SUICIDE'S EMBEZZLEMENT TAX REFUND CASE BASIS

Noblesville Bank Opposes Levy on $140,000 Taken by Bookkeeper.

By Times Special

NOBLESVILLE, Ind., Dec. 13.—One of the most unusual cases in the annals of Indiana courts was tried before Judge F. E. Hines in the Hamilton circuit court here in this city in record time. Only two hours were required for the introduction of the evidence notwithstanding the fact that the city of Noblesville, Hamilton county and the state of Indiana were defendants and some new law questions were involved.

H. D. Merrill, from the office of Attorney-General James M. Ogden at Indianapolis, appeared for the state.

The action was brought by the old Citizens State Bank of Noblesville, which went out of existence two and a half years ago owing to the defalcation of Omer G. Patterson, chief bookkeeper, who, before he committed suicide by drinking poison, confessed that he had stolen $140,000 from the bank over a period of twenty-one years.

Hamilton county was the named defendant in this action, but the state, the city of Noblesville and many others were interested in the outcome of the litigation.

In the event of a decision in favor of the bank, the state, county, city of Noblesville and many other claimants will have to refund.

Following the failure of the old bank, the new Citizens State Bank was organized and is now the largest financial institution in Hamilton county.

REPORT ON CENSUS OF STATE ISSUED

Population of 3,230,503 on April 1 Represents Gain of 300,113.

Final population figures for Indiana have just been issued by the census bureau in bulletin form. The population of the state on April 1, 1930, according to the fifteenth census, was 3,230,503, which represents an increase of 300,113, or 10.5 per cent, as compared with the population on Jan. 1, 1920. Both in rate and in actual numbers, this gain is the largest made since the decade ended in 1900. All of this increase can be accounted for by the growth of the larger cities and the suburban areas surrounding them.

Indiana was organized as a territory in 1800, at which time, after excluding those portions later taken to form Michigan and Illinois territories, the population was only 2,517. Admitted as a state in 1816, the census of 1830 showed 147,178 inhabitants. The population was doubled in each of the next two decades, and since then each decade has shown a definite though not spectacular increase. A million population was first passed in 1880, and two million in 1890. The census of 1930 first showed a population of more than three million, which gave an average of 89.8 inhabitants per square mile.

Indianapolis Gain Largest

There are thirty-four cities in Indiana which had a population of 10,000 or more in 1930, and all but five of these gained in population. Indianapolis, the capital and largest city in the state, had a population of 364,161, which represents an increase of 49,967, or 15.9 per cent over its population in 1920. This was the largest numerical increase made by any city in the state during the decade. Ft. Wayne was second, with a population of 114,946, representing a 33.8 per cent increase. Three other cities, South Bend, Evansville and Gary, had more than 100,000 inhabitants. Four of those five cities, all except Indianapolis, first attained 100,000 population between 1920 and 1930. The three cities below 50,000 and 100,000 population, in order of size, were Hammond, Terre Haute and East Chicago. The highest rate of increase for any city over 10,000 was made by Mishawaka, which had a population of 28,630, representing an 88.4 per cent increase. Gary's numerical gain of 45,048 inhabitants was a close second to the numerical gain made by Indianapolis, and its increase of 81.3 per cent was the second highest in the state.

Loss in 57 Counties

Of the ninety-two counties in Indiana, fifty-seven showed decreases between 1920 and 1930, while only thirty-five showed increases. The increase of population in the state has been definitely urban in character, and centers in the counties which have large cities. The rural counties have lost population. Marion county, in which Indianapolis is situated, is the largest in point of population, having 422,666 inhabitants, representing an increase of 74,605, or 21.4 per cent over its population of 1920. This was also the most densely populated county in the state, having an average of 1,064.7 persons to the square mile. Lake county, in which Gary is located, is the second most populous county, with 261,310. Its increase of 101,353 was the largest numerical gain of any county in the state, and the rate of 63.4 per cent was also the highest.

St. Joseph county, which ranked third in population, with 160,033 inhabitants, ranked second highest in rate of gain, having increased 54.9 per cent over its population in 1920. Gains in the remaining counties were all less than 30 per cent, while losses were as high as 15.9 per cent, and in one case, Brown county, the loss was 24.4 per cent. This county also the least densely populated, has an average of only sixteen persons to the square mile.

There are 523 incorporated cities and towns in Indiana, of which twenty-seven have between 5,000 and 10,000 population. The smallest is Shooters Hill, in Marion county, with only eleven inhabitants.
