

GEN. BUTLER PREPARES DEFENSE FOR COURT-MARTIAL

MARINE HERO RESTS IN HOME AT QUANTICO

Attends Reservation Movie Show in Evenings on Few Occasions.

STRIPPED OF SWORD

Has First Conference With His Lawyer for Trial on Feb. 16.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Major-General Smedley D. Butler turned today to active preparation of his defense on charges that he insulted Premier Mussolini of Italy by calling him a "hit-and-run driver." He will face court-martial at Philadelphia, Feb. 16.

Major Henry Leonard, U. S. M. C., retired, chief of his defense counsel, went to Quantico early today to plan the defense with Butler.

It was the first conference Butler has had with his lawyer. It was believed announcement of the retention of additional counsel might be made later today.

Butler made virtually no effort toward defense until Monday night when he was released from the order to confine himself to the Quantico reservation, which was given him when he was instructed to place himself under arrest last week.

Spends Time Quietly

The navy department, however, notified him that he was free to leave the reservation and go anywhere necessary in the preparation of his case.

Butler has been spending his time quietly at Quantico, remaining at his home most of the time. Quantities of mail, much of it commending his actions and promising him moral support, are coming to the general.

In the evenings Butler has, on a few occasions, attended the movie show on the reservation which he himself had equipped with sound apparatus a year ago.

Shorn of His Sword

He sits among the officers, wearing his uniform with the two stars of a major general on the shoulder straps.

Butler's stars are solid gold, hampered out of French coins by a marine. Sunday night he seemed greatly to enjoy a Clara Bow film. He does not enter his office at the post nor engage in any marine activity whatsoever.

He is not permitted to wear his sword.

Some one asked Butler how it felt to be in his present position.

"I feel," he said, "like the man who thought he was taking aspirin and found it was bichloride of mercury."

Official Attitude Softer

Major-General Ben H. Fuller, marine commandant, has indicated a willingness to grant Butler leave until his trial at Philadelphia on Feb. 16.

Further indications of a softening in the official attitude toward Butler were seen in Fuller's attitude toward a leave, as well as in what was tantamount to an announcement by Navy Secretary Adams that the Philadelphia hearings would be open to the public.

That the charges—outgrowth of a Philadelphia speech in which the general is said to have depicted Premier Mussolini of Italy as a hit-and-run motorist and a menace to peace—will be less severe than was first contemplated, was conceded here today.

Darrow May Aid

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 3.—Clarence Darrow and Arthur Garfield Hays will be requested to confer with counsel for General Smedley B. Butler and offer him assistance in behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union, Webster Powell, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania branch of that organization, said today.

Powell already has telegraphed Darrow asking if he would care to associate himself with the defense.

Confirmation Is Claimed

By United Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—Confirmation of the new, famous story picturing Premier Benito Mussolini as an alleged "hit and run" motorist was claimed by an anti-Fascist Italian newspaper published here today, despite important differences in dates in the published "confirmation."

The paper printed today a letter describing the incident General Smedley Butler is said to have described, in which an American touring with Mussolini, reported him as being Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. Confrontation of the fact he interviewed the Italian premier in 1926 has been announced. The letter, however, times the alleged hit-and-run incident on Sept. 14, 1930.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The largest artificial lake in the country, with an area of ninety-five square miles, is filling with water today after workmen completed the Bag-nell dam.

The dam, a project of the Union Electric and Power Company to supply St. Louis and Missouri lead mines with current, has been under construction eighteen months and employed a crew of 4,000 men.

The lake is expected to be filled by the first of July.

The lake, formed by damming the passage river, will extend 122 miles back from the dam. Land from four Missouri counties will be inundated.

Hundreds of homes have been moved from the water's path. One entire town, Linn Creek, was abandoned.

Total initial cost, including land, cost of construction of the dam and power plant, is approximately $35,000,000.

Safety Board To Quiz Doctor

Asks Explanation of Fees Charged Firemen.

The safety board today asked Dr. A. E. Crum, police surgeon, to appear before it next Tuesday with explanation of bills he submitted to two firemen for treatment of minor ailments.

Such treatment has been accorded firemen free in the past, the board was informed. One bill was for $2 and another for $8.

Permission was granted by the board to Leo Kaminsky, employee credit union organizer for an eastern philanthropist, to organize a savings and loan association among police and firemen.

Many city firemen now are paying high interest to loan sharks, Fire Chief Harry Vossell told the board.

Changes in the law, becoming an officer were brought by Mayor Herbert Fletcher against patrolman William A. Haugh, who was accused of having appeared at a restaurant at 2127 East Tenth street recently while off duty and engaging in an altercation with two civilians. Haugh was under suspension for liquor, Major Fletcher charged. His case was set for Feb. 10.

The Board Asked Bids for a New Roadster for the Assistant Fire Chief, and Authorized Purchase of a New Ford Emergency Car for the Game-well Department.

"The only persons who have a chance for nomination under the primary system are those with money or money back of them."

"The 1928 state convention was an example of the convention system," declared Cromer.
