

OLD AGE BILL 'HIDING' ROUSES NEJDL'S WRATH

Senator Asks to See House
Draft and Is Refused,
He Declares.

Republican senators today were speculating to what lengths the emergency that reappeared late Wednesday may run before the current legislative session is ended.

Twice in the senate Wednesday, Senator James J. Nejdil voiced bitter protest to tactics which have prevented his seeing the copy of the old age pension bill, passed by the house, and now reposing in the senate's safe until Lieutenant-Governor Edgar D. Bush sees fit to assign it to a committee.

A similar measure, of which Nejdil is coauthor, will be a special order of business in the senate Feb. 10.

Nejdil Is Wrathful

Facing the senate, Nejdil declared: "A certain house bill arrived here approximately a week ago. It was signed for and should have been handed down and assigned to a committee. I inquired about and located it in the safe of the senate clerk. He told me he could not let me see the bill.

"If that's the way you are going to deal, let's let the world know about it."

To Senator Robert L. Moorhead's question, Senator Nejdil said he referred to the house old age pension bill.

Rowley Also Angry

A bit later, Senator Earl Rowley (Rep., La Porte and Starke) took Senator C. Oliver Holmes (Rep., Lake) sternly to task for not having recognized him as he tried four times to get the floor. Holmes was presiding temporarily at the time.

Holmes explained it was because the majority floor leader, Senator Lee J. Hartzell was trying to end the debate.

"I think it was mighty discourteous, both on the part of the chair and the senator," Rowley said with a scowl.

UNEMPLOYMENT CURES SOUGHT BY ROOSEVELT

Three Possible Remedies
Are Outlined by Governor of New York.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, who recently called together governors of seven states to discuss and study unemployment causes and relief measures, in the following interview outlines his ideas of possible remedies for unemployment depression.

(Copyright, 1931, by United Press)

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 5.—Three remedies for unemployment and its consequent distress were outlined by Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt today.

The Governor based his suggestions on the findings of a recent conference, initiated by him, of the Governors of six of the principal industrial states of the northeast, which normally employ 49 per cent of all the country's labor.

Three Remedies Proposed

"The conference, which was in session three days at Albany recently, is to be resumed at the invitation of Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania.

Governor Roosevelt suggested: A study of all forms of unemployment insurance here and abroad with a view of evolving a workable, model American plan.

A study of the labor laws of the principal industrial states to bring them into closer uniformity.

A clearing house for employment information to guide labor to the markets where needed and away from the markets where not needed.

Governor Roosevelt, regarded as an outstanding potential Democratic presidential candidate in 1932, because of re-election by the record breaking plurality of more than 725,000, continued:

Ill-Considered Prophecy

"Only two years ago many prominent people were saying publicly that the industrial boom then in progress would continue indefinitely and that never again would the United States suffer economically.

"So much for ill-considered prophecy, based on unsound thinking and the failure to read history.

"Two significant points were brought out by the conference.

"One was that the wage payments in the nation as a whole were about nine and a half billion dollars less in 1930 than in 1929—an appalling decrease in the purchasing power of the country.

"The other startling fact was that in spite of all of the efforts of federal, state, city, county and other government agencies, the total volume of public works in 1930 and 1931 was no greater than in 1929."

FRANCE OFFERS MILITARY HONOR TO DESERT KING

Overlord of Morocco Rules
Empire of Half Million Subjects.

BY PIERRE PIGEARE
United Press Staff Correspondent

MARRAKECH, Morocco, Feb. 5.—France paid belated tribute today to the last great feudal lord, the seigneur of the Atlas mountains, El Hadj Thami Ben Mahomed Mezouai El Glaoui, pacha of Marrakech. Representatives of the governor-general came from Rabat to the seigneur's "Fairybook" palace of the sands to pin the ribbon of the military medal on the white berneuse of the desert chief.

The Glaoui gave France, single-handed, the great Moroccan empire. Single-handed he defended the rich country from German seizure during the World war after France had accepted his word to keep peace and had withdrawn all her battalions from Morocco.

The military medal is not the only gift from France, for every year two beautiful de luxe automobiles are driven up to the palace here, and left in the courtyard as the gift of the French governor-general. The Pacha's garage would rival that of any millionaire.

Overlord of the Atlas, the Glaoui rules and dispenses tribal justice over a half million Moors. He has life or death power over them and if he wished to turn his Moors against the French, France and Spain probably would be run out of Morocco.

In his palace, which consists of a series of palaces one inside of the other, he keeps his harem of 260, three being his official wives. The other women came from various tribes. His children are said to number more than 150, but he is raising personally only one son.

The Glaoui is a golfing fan, and although he has to travel nearly one thousand miles to play, he gets in his game every year in France and has improved his play considerably. He is also an enthusiast at the French horse races at Vichy, Vittel and Paris.

He has palaces scattered all over Morocco, the finest here at Marrakech, not far from the famed Koutuba tower of emeralds.

Sugar Season to Open Soon
KOKOMO, Ind., Feb. 5.—Owners of the few remaining sugar camps in Howard county are beginning preparations for the annual harvest. They believe that owing to the mild winter the season will open earlier than usual, with prospects good for maple trees to yield fair quantities of sap.
