CHRISTIAN SCIENCE THEME ANNOUNCED

"Spirit," is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, Feb. 8. Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible:

Now the Lord is that Spirit; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. But we all, with open face beholding as in a glass the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord II Cor. 3:17, 18.

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook: "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy.

Material made up of involuntary and voluntary error, of a negative right and a positive wrong, the latter calling itself right. Man's spiritual inheritance is never wrong. It is the likeness of man's Maker. Matter can not connect mortals with the true origin and facts of being, in which all must end. It is by acknowledging the supremacy of Spirit, which annuls the claims of matter, that mortals can lay off mortality and find the indissoluble spiritual link which establishes forever in the divine likeness, inseparable from his creator.

VOLSTEAD ACT SILLY, BUTLER SAYS IN SPEECH

Prohibition Law s Termed Class Legislation by General.

Following is the seventh article in the series on General Butler.

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1931, by United Press)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Two years as commissioner of public safety in Philadelphia gave Major-General Smedley Butler an opportunity to see the seamy side of prohibition.

He saw his old friend, Colonel Alexander Williams, incur court-martial because of liquor, and soon thereafter end a brilliant career by running his automobile into San Francisco bay. What does he think of prohibition?

He made a speech at Oakland, Cal., in 1927, and mentioned the "Silly Volstead law." Anti-prohibitionists began to cheer. But Butler telegraphed in reply to an inquiry from then Representative William D. Upshaw (Dem., Ga.), terse summary of what he had said.

"No half-way upholding of national dignity, as in case of silly Volstead act, which has been enacted in this country; allows rich to have liquor when the poor can not get it. Had thought law written for everybody, but while a Philadelphia policeman I discovered my mistake."

In Favor of Prohibition

"I am emphatically in favor of prohibition. I have not said or even intimated anything to the contrary; but I do consider the Volstead act and all other toothless enforcement laws silly in the extreme."

"Law to be obeyed must be respected; to respect the hand of the law must be feared, and the hand of the law will be feared only when mandatory, adequate and severe penalties attach to violations."

Josephus Daniels of Raleigh, N. C., prominent dry democrat, who as secretary of the navy abolished the wine ration in the service, once urged that Butler be placed in charge of federal prohibition enforcement.

Senator R. B. Howell (Rep., Neb.) once proposed that Butler undertake to dry up Washington, which Howell has described as a "bootleggers' paradise."

Practice Dry Beliefs

Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, a dry leader, supported Butler, saying he had known his Philadelphia police experience and sought to have his leave extended that he might go on.

Butler describes himself as a practicing prohibitionist.

"I am a prohibitionist, believe in it, practice it, but will not provide for the cause," he said after he returned to the marines. "I am not a prohibition propagandist nor a professional reformer, uplifter nor purist."

"In my time I have been a drinker—not a 'booze hound,' but a moderate drinker who really could 'take it or leave it alone.' My work in Philadelphia made me a prohibitionist."

When Butler returned a second time to command Quantico, the assignment from which he has just been relieved, he was not provided martial, he undertook to dry up the village adjoining the post. He did it by forbidding marines to enter the town until all the bootleggers were driven out.

Barber shops, drug stores, movies and the closing saloons throughout the village were broken up, and business men became so aroused that the village officials were compelled to undertake a series of raids and clean up the settlement.

(Next—General Butler and the State Department.)

base his morning sermon on "If any man will do His will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak myself." At night, his remarks will be on "And this is the will of God that we love one another, that we keep His commandments, and that we believe in Him, may have everlasting life."
