

ASSAIL HOOVER BITTERLY FOR SHOALS VETO

'Brought Joy to Power Trust,' Senate Told by Black.

By Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance
WASHINGTON, March 6.—Muscle Shoals, killed by President Hoover and thirty-four senators and apparently entombed, today emerged a bristling, fighting issue which undoubtedly will figure in the next campaign.

Already plans are afoot for passage in the next congress of a bill very similar to the compromise which Hoover vetoed. And it was predicted in the debate preceding the senate roll call that it would then be passed over another veto, if necessary.

Such senators as Norris (Rep., Neb.); McKellar (Dem., Tenn.); Black (Dem., Ala.), and Smith (Dem., S. C.) already have laid the ground work to demand passage of a Muscle Shoals bill next session.

Veto Torn to Shreds

The defeat of the Shoals compromise, by a 49 to 34 vote, which failed to furnish the necessary two-thirds, marked the second time a President has prevailed over congress in this controversy. Two years ago Coolidge gave a similar bill a pocket veto. Hoover sent this year's bill back with a long veto message.

The veto was torn to shreds in the senate debate.

Hoover's figures on the probable cost of power manufactured at the Shoals were refuted by lower figures from the war department's own report on the Tennessee river.

His contention that the leasing provisions of the compromise were ineffectual was denied and denounced. His demands that the government not enter the power business were met with the explanation that the government already owns Muscle Shoals and is operating it.

Violated Campaign "Pledge"

His campaign statements made at Elizabethton, Tenn., were recalled and compared to his statements in the veto message.

Those campaign statements, Black told the senate in a ringing speech, would have "made any reasonable men believe he (Hoover) would sign such a measure as he now vetoes." The Alabamian said the President had a thorough and complete misconception of the compromise he disapproved.

Black said that the veto would bring "joy and gladness to the hearts of those who will contribute to the campaign," and Norris said that because of the veto the "power trust is in high jubilee."

The resurrected Muscle Shoals probably will be a topic at the progressives' conference, called by Norris and others, for next week.

Bandits Wound Men

TAYLORSVILLE, Ind., March 6.—Serious wounds were suffered by Stanley Hunt, 40, attendance at a filling station, when he was robbed by three men at a bridge a mile west of here. A bullet passed through Hunt's chest.

KONJOLA MADE LIFE PLEASANT

Man Tells How, At Last, He Found Right Medicine for His Many Ailments.

Tens of thousands, who put their faith in Konjola, the new and different medicine, have rejoiced, while others have declared: "How I wish I had known of Konjola long ago."

Surely life teaches no lesson more valuable than that sufferers profit by the experiences of those who found in this new medicine the very remedy they needed for ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Call on the Konjola Man at the Hook Dependable Drug Store, Illinois and Washington streets, Indianapolis, and get all the facts about the medicine that has won a million friends. But right now, before you do anything else, read the words of Mr. Charles J. Burris, 1330 Roache street, this city, who said to the Konjola Man:

"For about two years I suffered with indigestion, and kidney and liver trouble. Gas formed in my stomach shortly after eating, and I had cramping pains of indigestion. My back ached almost constantly, and I was forced to get up several times every night. I had attacks of biliousness and severe headaches, and my bowels were very irregular. Friends induced me to try Konjola and I began to improve. I took this medicine. I had to take several bottles, but I didn't mind that for Konjola made my life pleasant, and I strongly recommend Konjola to other sufferers."

It is what a medicine actually does that counts; and Konjola can be counted on for results.

The Konjola Man is at the Hook Dependable Drug Store, Illinois and Washington streets, Indianapolis, where he is meeting the public daily.
