Living Forever!

In this day of turmoil and fever heat most people are busy earning money, accumulating property, stocks, bonds and great wealth and are not giving a thought for the days to come, or even how their money is to be used after they are gone.

Man's greatest wealth is his children and even though he may not believe in immortality, he can live on through his children by instilling proper principles in them.

Years ago people realized their greatest assets were their children and they gave much more of their time to their family than we do now. Today in the mad rush for material gains, people lose sight of their greatest wealth—their children.

If you are leaving ethical training out of the education of your children, you must accept the responsibility.

Yes, we can live forever only through succeeding generations. But we must not forget that while we live today, we must earn and save. Not only must we train our children in the proper spiritual channels, but if we wish our lives to be of eternal value, we must serve and give while we live.

The greatest obligation we owe to society is to see that our succeeding generations are left with the most important asset—the moral and ethical values of life and the spirit of serving and giving.

The greatest asset in the world today is our youth, and our greatest heritage to them is the moral fiber we can instill in them.

Every day a thread makes a skein a year!
