

WOMAN STARTS 41ST YEAR AS COURT MATRON

Never Has Missed Single Day at Her Job at Statehouse.

Fortieth anniversary of her appointment as matron of the appellate court is being observed today by Miss Margaret Irwin. In these forty years, from the very first day that the appellate court began its sessions, April 1, 1891, Miss Irwin has not missed a single day doing her job at the statehouse.

Today she recalled that first court composed of two Democrat and three Republican judges appointed by the then Governor Alvin Hovey. "The legislature was Democratic and the Governor was a Republican," Miss Irwin recalled. "So the Governor hurried to appoint the new appellate judges before the legislators took that task upon themselves."

Worked at Grand Hotel
"At that time I was employed at the Grand hotel, which was really grand in those days. I had been a maid for all the visiting dignitaries who stopped at the hotel. I waited on President Grant and President Cleveland and such old-time stage and opera stars as Patti, Bernhardt and Louise Kellogg."

"One of the most peculiar jobs I ever was assigned at the hotel was to bring hediocles over here to the statehouse and make up a cot for a Senator Smith Green. His senate seat was being contested and he refused to leave the chamber, fearing that it would be taken from him."

"When I first became matron of the court one of my big jobs was to care for the fireplaces in each judge's chamber and in the court room itself. There were used for heating. But in those early days we burned wood and coal in the fireplaces and the statehouse had about as much warmth as a corn-crib."

Purchased Own Home
From revenues of her statehouse labors, Miss Irwin purchased a home at 601 Eddy street, and cared for her parents, three brothers and their wives, all of whom now are dead. She is a native of Lockport, N. Y., but came to Indianapolis with her parents as a child. She has been a lifelong member of St. John's Catholic church and has a Sunday service attendance record comparable to the one on her daily job, she says.

Blessed with a sunny disposition, Miss Irwin is not one to think "the good old days" were any better than now.

She likes modern things and young people, but she wouldn't pose for her picture, nor permit it to appear in the paper.
