What's in Fashion? Spring's Coat Favorites

NEW YORK, April 6.—Hundreds of thousands of fashionable women voted yesterday for their favorite spring coat. They voted for it by wearing it in the thousands of Easter parades all over the country.

Among the many coats shown and worn this spring we've chosen six of those selected by fashionable women as examples of some of the most useful coats you can have.

Women choose these coats because they're good looking, easy to wear, individual. And because they make smart ensembles with dresses. Here they are:

(1) The coat with the shawl neckline is a leading favorite. Not any one particular scarf. But fabric scarfs and fur scarfs, long scarfs and short scarfs. Scarfs that drape or button or tie. They're easy to wear because you can adjust them in so many different ways.

Shawl Collar Coat Liked

We've had one sketched at the bottom of the illustration with the practical fur scarf that's so popular. This scarf can be tied, draped or left to hang loose.

2 The coat with the shawl collar isn't new, but it's one of the most important spring fashions. Because it's becoming to almost anybody. And because so many women like the mystery of the soft long-haired furs these collars are made of.

Some of them are long shawl collars, extending almost to the waistline. More of them are shorter.

Some are one-sided scarfs, with a wide almost cape-like collar on one side and narrower on the other. These can be draped up around the throat or left hanging.

The center figure shows a smart shawl collar coat with the fur set back a little from the edge.

Collar Is a Narrow Roll

(3) A new kind of coat this spring has quickly become a leading fashion—the coat with the narrow roll collar.

It can be worn with a separate fur scarf or with a silk scarf or with no scarf at all and be equally smart. The sketch at the top illustrates one of these coats and shows the wider sleeve that's so often found with this narrow collar.

(4) A coat almost as fashionable as the roll collar coat—and quite as new—is the coat without any collar at all.

It's sleek and sophisticated. But you can make it feminine by putting the collar of your dress outside or by adding a soft scarf.

Cape Coat Still Favored

(5) You saw lots of cape coats last spring, so they're not a new type. But they're still fashionable. And the 1931 cape is different.

It's smaller this year, fits the shoulders closely and sometimes is draped in the front in the manner of a fichu. A popular coat with this cape is the one with the wider sleeve that's so often found with this narrow collar.

(6) A sixth, outstandingly fashionable spring coat is the one that has a military look. And that means it is one of two types.

It's fitted at the waistline, closes in multiple-breasted style and has wide lapels. And then it's a reefer type of coat. Directorate, it's called.

Looks Like Uniform

Or it has wide revers that button over or fall loose (as you please) and deep gauntlet cuffs. And then it looks like a military officer's uniform coat.

Of course there are other fashionable coats. But these are six of those most in fashion. Most in fashion because more women like them than any other kinds.

GIRLS' WEEK TO BE OBSERVED IN CITY

Girls' week will be observed this week by Indiana clubwomen, according to an announcement by Miss Dorothy Phillips, chairman of the Junior Clubs of the Seventh Federation.

Miss Phillips has arranged with the Indianapolis public library to have display of books suited to young girls in all branch libraries. Indianapolis firms have been asked to have displays in keeping with the observance.

Feminine Indianapolis Blossoms Out on Easter Morning

A brilliant Easter Sunday morning afforded feminine Indianapolis the chance to blossom forth in dazzling Easter finery. The first act of the Easter parade occurred in the churches, where thousands thronged for devotions.

Shiny straw hats, whose fashionable gleaming surfaces reflected stray sunbeams, almost distracted worshippers, although the finale came when services were dismissed, and the rest of the costumes, glistening in their newness, were displayed.

Longer skirts, the reappearance of the "figure" evident in the snug fitting, belted coats and suits, and flared skirts, the lovely new shades, and color contrasts made a brilliant panorama.

Demureness, suggested in the longer skirts, was emphasized in the new hats, with their flattering brims, and flower trimmings. And "giving things" in tricornes and youthful flares, added to the occasion.

Few Wear Corsets

Those who were fortunate enough to have corsets from the boy friends or thoughtful husbands were self-consciously, as badges of conquest. Lovely orchids, gardenias, sweet peas, violets and lilies of the valley, nestled on feminine shoulders, and not a few gardenias gleamed from manly lapels.

Although there were a few paraders on Meridian street, the majority of Indianapolis persons drove to the country clubs, where parties were held for children.

At the Highland Golf and Country Club an Easter egg hunt was held for more than one hundred children. Dinner was served at a long table in the dining room, decorated with Easter baskets of flowers, with bunnies and fuzzy chickens and nests of gay Easter eggs.

While the children played mothers paraded their new frocks and fathers golfed. The course was crowded.

Golf Course Also Crowded

The Indianapolis Country Club is not opened, but the golf course there also was crowded.

An egg hunt and kite flying contest was held at Meridian Hills for more than seventy-five youngsters. The clubhouse was decorated with clusters of daisies and the mantel held two huge Easter baskets of colored eggs, bunnies and tinted chickens.

Hazel Holmes Love won first prize for finding the silver egg and Harry Sheridan won a prize for discovering the gold egg. Johnny Bob Durham was finder of the most red eggs, and Florence Cheek of the greatest number of eggs. Bob Jenkins won the boys' prize for finding the greatest number.

The kite flying contest afforded the elders as much amusement as it did the children, for in this sport the fathers took a hand. Billy Murren had the largest kite, Billy Clark had the smallest and Junior Jones the tallest. Dick Means, Mrs. W. C. Winslow's nephew, achieved the greatest altitude. Consolation prizes were awarded Mary Alice Aiken and Ralph Clark for having the worst luck.

Woodstock Club had no special party, but there were many individual parties and several dinners. Children swarmed the lawn in their pastel spring coats and bonnets, and admiring mothers, who were waiting for "daddy" to come in from golf.

Not more than two or three drops of rain fell, although it threatened toward evening to mar the day or to spot the new spring togs.

A "SLIMMING" MODEL

And if you need slimming, here's a lovely model for you, for a slenderizing effect is apparent at a glance.

A problem that confronts every style creator is the woman that is too large. And it is a problem that one must give serious thought.

To be smart, the figure must be made to appear slender, and that means it must be lengthened in effect.

Today's dress will please the most fastidious. It is one of those simple, smart types that is ever ready to meet daytime occasions generally for most of us.

A crepe printed silk made the original. Styles No. 257 may be had in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46 inches bust. Size 36 requires 2 3/4 yards 39-inch with 3/4 yard 35-inch contrasting.

Order a copy of our new Fashion Magazine. Attractive styles for women, misses and children. And instructive lessons in sewing. Price of book is 10 cents. Price of pattern is 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

Europe Gives Us Lessons in 'Scents'

BY JULIA BLANSHARD

NEW YORK, April 6.—"You can tell whether a woman has lived abroad or not by the way she uses perfume!"

Elizabeth Hardy, young society woman who has become New York agent for the exclusive line of Spanish perfumes that the royal house of Spain uses, made that observation.

There are, according to Miss Hardy, certain basic rules that the well-groomed continental woman observes in her toilette that American women can profit by knowing. She is scientifically thorough. She buys her whole line of toilet articles in the same scent! Face soap, bath soap, bath salts, cologne, perfume, pomade, foundation cream, lipstick, face powder.

And what a saving it is! For used all together, so much less is needed of all of them to give the delicate aroma of fragrance that the sophisticated desire.

Just Use Common Scents!

Once the beauty room is fully supplied, the continental woman begins her beauty tricks. Here are a few Miss Hardy suggests as worthy of consideration as part of American beauty rites:

1. Never, never put perfume directly on a handkerchief. Each time the fresh laundry comes in to be put away, take a tiny piece of cotton, dampen it with your perfume, and put it in the middle of your stack of handkerchiefs, in a wooden or metal handkerchief box that closes tight. Every hanky will have a delicate fragrance, and think of the saving!

2. Do the same trick with your glove boxes and your lingerie wardrobe.

Perfume Your Hat

3. Once a week, put a single drop of perfume on the inside of your hat, never wearing immediately any hat you have so treated.

4. When waving your hair, set the wave with cologne. The cologne's alcohol base will incorporate and leave only the faintest suggestion of fragrance on your hair.

5. Finish your manicure by going over each finger with a bit of cotton, dipped in perfume.

6. After your scented bath, when grooming for a party, dip a cotton-covered orange stick into your perfume and go over the entire inside of your ears. This grooms them beautifully without drying out your ears the way soap and water will.

7. The only two spots on which you should put perfume directly are one drop under the nostrils, and one more drop under low-hanging knot or curls of hair at the nape of your neck.

8. Brush your eyebrows with a little cologne. It gets the powder out and puts a fragrant seal in.

Club Luncheon Slated
