

MAX SCHMELING IS 'SQUARE GUY,' GOLF PROVES IT

World's Champion Boxer Is Likable Chap, Unspoiled By Fame.

BY BOYD GURLEY, Editor of The Times

FRENCH LICK, Ind., April 28.—If the way a man plays golf is a test of character, as many golfers insist, then put it down that Max Schmeling will attempt no fouls for the purpose of winning and will use his head if the going is bad.

As a golfer, it so happens that Max is an editor and the editor of The Times a pugilist.

As a human being, Schmeling is likable, friendly, guileless, and unaffected by his eminence as a world champion.

He placed his racial thrift in the hands of his manager, and takes a real delight in signing his name to photographs for the boy guests at this resort who follow him with much more curiosity than they will the Governors who come a few weeks hence. Women guests generally receive their signatures via his press agent.

Golf Is Max's Routine

If you happen to know your Berlin, you are admitted to his confidence. Thus it happened that the editor of The Times was invited to play golf, for that is Schmeling's routine while here. Golf, if you call it that, in the morning and golf in the afternoon.

Perhaps he is homesick, a little, or at least that is the impression that he gives his eyes light up at mention of the Linden. In his post-war pride he tells you that Berlin is growing, that now it has more than four and a half millions of residents and that things will be better.

The champion was too young to feel the hates of war. He is young enough now to look only to the future and he believes in his country and its people.

Fights His Way Out

The description of the golf game would not be interesting, except for this. When in the rough—and you will find him there—Schmeling keeps fighting his way out. He fights the ball every minute. That may account for his score.

But he counts all the strokes.

He does not try to chop down the "practice" swings. He is elated at the one good shot. He never admits defeat until the last hole.

Schmeling may be a Neanderthal man, but he is a boy, a very likable boy, a simple boy untouched by fame.

STEEL CHIEF'S WIDOW WINS ESTATE SUIT

Entitled to Half of Holdings, Judge Rules, Under Alabama Law.

By United Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 29.—Mrs. Annie Louise Woodward, widow of Harvey G. Woodward, millionaire steel magnate, will receive half of her husband's estate and all personal property under the dower rights law of Alabama.

Woodward bequeathed $7,500,000 to establish a progressive school, leaving his widow a life income of $2,000 monthly, homes in Birmingham and Maine, and personal property.

Mrs. Woodward filed a contest and Probate Judge W. P. Stiles ruled that she was entitled to one-half of the entire estate.

OPPOSES TAX BOOSTS

Fat Harrison Takes Issue With Recent Statements of Senators.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Indication that progressive demands for increased taxes will meet with little encouragement from Democrats was seen today in a declaration by Senator Pat Harrison (Dem., Miss.), ranking Democrat on the senate finance committee.

Without mentioning names, Harrison took issue with recent statements by Senators Borah (Rep., Ind.), Couzens (Rep., Mich.), Norris (Rep., Neb.) and other progressives, advocating increased inheritance and income levies in the higher brackets.

Philanthropy of Mrs. Sophia Springhorn, 57, of 4051 North New Jersey street, during her lifetime, was carried into her will filed in probate court Tuesday by Leo M. Rappaport, executor.

Her estate of $60,000, consisting of $50,000 in personal property and real estate valued at $10,000, was divided among charitable institutions, former employees and friends of Mrs. Springhorn and distant relatives.

Bequests included the German general old folks' home at Indianapolis, $1,000; the Family Welfare Society, $1,000; the Indianapolis Orphans' home, $500; Home for Aged Women at Indianapolis, $500, and the John Herron Art Institute, $2,000.

'LEGS' DIAMOND SINKING; LITTLE HOPE IS HELD

Hangs Grimly to Waning Life as Cops Hunt Five Gunmen.

CATSKILL, N. Y., April 29.—While Jack (Legs) Diamond held grimly to a waning life today, state and county officials pushed a relentless search for five gunmen believed to have shot him down.

Physicians at the Albany hospital held little hope for recovery of the New York gang leader from shotgun wounds received at the Aratoga Inn, near Cairo, Sunday night. Diamond was in a coma most of the night and his condition grew worse steadily. He slept with the aid of opiates.

Dr. T. M. Holmes said a blood transfusion or an emergency operation would be performed if Diamond rallied. Diamond already was in a weakened condition from wounds inflicted by enemy gangsters six months ago at the Hotel Monticello, New York, and doctors fear pneumonia may develop.

Meanwhile, Attorney General John J. Bennett, who obtained a speedy indictment against Diamond's chief henchman and failed four others of his confederates Tuesday, continued his drive to rid Greene county of gangsters.

State troopers were making a wide search for five men who abandoned an armed automobile a short distance from the place where Diamond was shot down. They have enlisted the aid of New York detectives in their hunt.

The automobile was a veritable arsenal. On the rear seat were two sawed shotguns, two pistols with two-inch barrels, termed by the underworld as "those new murder guns," two other pistols, and a pair of ice picks sharpened to needle points.

Dime Romance

By United Press

NEW YORK, April 29.—All they needed was $2 for a marriage license—but they had only 35 cents, and a dime of that went for the wedding ring.

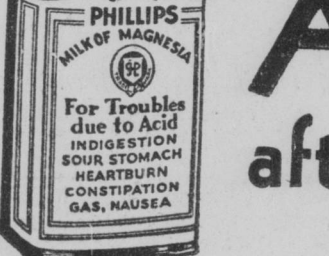

So Frank De Polo, 18, and Mary Forschner, 17, his fiancée, decided on a trip to the zoo and a ride on the subway.

They were found, penniless, riding back and forth on a subway, when police held them.

'KILLER' BURKE STARTS TERM

'I'm Glad It's Over,' He Tells Prison Guards.

By United Press

MARQUETTE, Mich., April 29.—Convict No. 5293—otherwise known as Fred Burke, professional machine-gun killer—today started the first twenty-four hours of a life sentence in Marquette state penitentiary.

Burke—who pleaded guilty in St. Joseph Monday to the murder of a policeman—was "dressed in" shortly after 7 p. m. Tuesday night, after officers had brought him here on a 500-mile automobile trip.

He must spend at least the next ten or twelve years of his life behind the walls of the branch prison, known as one of the bleakest penitentiaries in the country. With good behavior, he will be eligible for parole in twelve to fifteen years.

"I'm glad it's all over," he told his guards as the long trip neared its end and the walls of the prison were seen ahead. "I'm terribly sorry for everything—not that I have to serve my time, I don't mean that; but I'm sorry I killed that boy."

Burke shot patrolman Charles Skelly off the running board of his car in 1928, as the young officer was trying to settle a traffic argument between the intoxicated Burke and another motorist.
