What's in Fashion?

Trimming Along Edges

Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, May 2.—Patou and Chanel are the ones who are in this spring. Along the edge of dresses and coats, the edge of a short sleeve.

It's Trimming Everywhere

Trimming, too, on the edge of a cape or a peplum. On the edge of cuffs and collars. On the edge of a surplus closing or a seam in a skirt. Even on the bottom of a skirt.

It's just one more of those little indications that fashion is growing more and more feminine. Something soft along the edge instead of a plain, hard edge—that's the idea.

And usually something that looks like hand work—the kind of work that might have been done by feminine fingers.

Crocheted edges, for example, put on along the neckline and the edge of the sleeves or the edge of a collar. Fine points or little scallops. Embroidered scallops—done in buttonhole stitch—along the edges of a coat cuff and collar. Lace edges on collars and sleeves of dresses.

Lots of Scallops

You'll see lots of scalloped edges, if you watch . . . both embroidered scallops and bound scallops. Chanel's saw-tooth edging is really a scallop, but sharp and pointed instead of rounded off.

The newest way Chanel uses this saw-tooth edging is applied to the seams of skirts. Not really an edge, but giving the effect of one.

Patou's turret edge is a square scallop and is especially smart on collars and cuffs.

Ruchings are back in fashion, tucked in along the necklines of dresses. And a most becoming touch of softness they are.

Fine pleatings are used much the same way, and around the edges of peplums and the bottom of skirts as well.

Pipings, of course, are effective as edging treatments, especially when they contrast with the rest of the costume.

They're appearing along seams, too, and can make a most effective design used this way.

One of the newest edgings is made by cutting out the design of some smart flower print and appliqueing it along the edge of the collar or caplet of the dress.

Watch for these edgings. They're going to look particularly smart when the new light summer dresses begin to be worn.

Jaded Salad Will Spoil Appetites

BY SISTER MARY

NEA Service Writer

In the spring almost anybody's appetite turns lightly to a cold, crisp salad nestled on a bed of lettuce leaves.

But it will turn away again, just as quickly, if the lettuce leaf background has a wilted, jaded appearance. Salads, to be effective, have to be prepared carefully.

Greens always must be handled with care. Whether you are using lettuce, endive, romaine, or watercress, give it the necessary attention.

As soon as the lettuce or salad plant comes from the market, put it into a large panful of cold water to freshen.

Clip Off Leaves

Clip off the edges of the leaves that are bruised beyond revival. Wash through several waters, holding each leaf under running water at a sharp angle.

Let the washed greens stand in cold water until crisp. Then drain them carefully and wrap in a soft towel. Place them on ice until needed.

The moisture that invariably clings to the leaves will be absorbed by the towel and the dampness will keep the lettuce deliciously crisp.

Swing Them in Bag

If you haven't time for this leisurely chilling and drying, put the greens, after washing and crisping, into a large square of cheesecloth. Gather the corners loosely in a knot, allowing plenty of room for the greens, and swing the bundle vigorously, making twelve or fifteen revolutions at arm's length.

Never let greens stand with a French dressing over them before serving. Any dressing will hasten the wilting process after a reasonable time, but the acid of a French dressing acts more directly than that of a dressing made with eggs.

RICE CUSTARD PUDDING

Rice custard puddings make excellent spring desserts. A certain amount of starch still is necessary in the diet, you must remember. One recipe includes 2 eggs, 1 pint of milk, a pinch of salt, ¼ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon nutmeg, and 1 cup of cooked rice.

Beat the eggs slightly, and add the other ingredients. Be sure to mix the rice with the custard very well, so that no kernels will stick together. Set your baking dish in a shallow pan of water, and bake in a moderate oven for about forty-five minutes or until the custard has set.

If you find that you prefer a pudding with a little more custard than rice, cut down the quantity of rice as low as a half of a cup.

Serve the pudding with cream, hard sauce or a little whipped cream. For a variation use brown sugar instead of white.

Popular and Nourishing

An oven baked rice pudding, that uses uncooked rice is also popular and nourishing. This recipe requires ½ cup rice, 1 quart milk, 2-3 cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, sprinkling of nutmeg, and 2 cups of raisins.

Wash the rice, put it in a baking dish and pour the sugar, salt and milk over it. Stir until it is mixed, add the raisins, and sprinkle with nutmeg.

Bake in a slow oven until the rice is tender. This will require about two and one-half hours. Stir the mixture every half hour, until the very last one, in order to keep the texture evenly creamy.

The pudding may be served either hot or cold, and raisins may be included or omitted.

The destruction of sin is the divine method of pardon. Divine Life destroys death. Truth destroys error, and Love destroys hate. Being destroyed, sin needs no other form of forgiveness. Does not God's pardon, destroying any one sin, prophesy and involve the final destruction of all sin (p. 339).
