

FOURTH DEATH RIDDLE FACED BY SAN DIEGO

Telephone Operator's Body
Found; Eleven Wounds
From Knife.

By United Press
SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 4.—M. E. Garrison, railroad employee, was held today by police, who declared they were not satisfied with his explanation of his visit late Saturday night with Hazel Bradshaw, 22-year-old telephone operator, found stabbed to death.

Conflicting stories of a taxicab driver and a street car conductor, coupled with Garrison's asserted inability to explain what happened to a brown suit it was said he wore, caused police to predict they were near a solution of San Diego's fourth murder mystery in seven weeks.

Eleven Knife Wounds
Miss Bradshaw's body was found behind a wall in the Indian village at Balboa park, with eleven knife wounds on her body, six of them in the region of the heart.

Garrison took her to a motion picture show Saturday night, after they left the railroad offices where both worked.

Shortly before midnight, Garrison said, he and Miss Bradshaw walked to her home through a little valley that passes the Indian village, now used as a Boy Scout camp.

He kissed her good night at her doorstep, he said, and went home. Miss Bradshaw never entered her home, relatives said.

Stories in Conflict
Corroborating Garrison's story was the statement of J. M. Hughes, street car conductor, who said Garrison was a passenger on his car shortly after midnight.

Police were told to accept this story when H. J. Collins, a taxi driver, identified Garrison as a man he took to the El Centro apartments, where Garrison lives, at 2 a. m. Sunday.

With Garrison was a girl, Collins added. He believed she was Miss Bradshaw. Garrison was slightly intoxicated, he said, and carried a package which resembled a bottle.

Not far from Miss Bradshaw's body, the remains of a quart bottle of wine was found.

Suit Statement Disputed
Police were told by Garrison's landlady that when he left his apartment Saturday he was wearing a dark brown suit. Garrison denied owning such a suit, police said.

W. H. Parker, Garrison's superior, declared Garrison often wore a dark brown suit to work.

The three other unsolved murders here in recent weeks were the kidnapping and slaying of 10-year-old Virginia Brooks last February; the garroting and hanging of Louise Teuber, 17-year-old clerk, April 18; and the strangling of Mrs. W. B. (Diamond Dolly) Bibbens about the same time as the Teuber murder.

By RIPLEY

Following is the explanation of Ripley's "Believe It or Not" which appeared in Saturday's Times:
The Blue Sun—There is an authentic record of the occurrence of a blue sun. The phenomenon took place on the island of Java on Aug. 23, 1893, as a result of the most extraordinary volcanic explosion of modern times.
The explosion, which all but destroyed the island of Krakatoa, in the Straits of Sunda, between Java and Sumatra, caused huge clouds of smoke and dust to completely hide the sun.
When the heavenly orb finally became visible, it was the color of the deep blue sea, and it remained a deep blue until the coming of the night. This instance, unheard of either before or after, is incomparably more unusual than even the proverbial "blue moon."

Bourbon Rule in Spain Began With Philip V, Mere Youth of 17

Married His Queen When She Was 14 and Overcame Early Troubles.

This is the fourth of a series of five stories about the Bourbon kings of Spain, which King Alfonso XIII of Spain was the last monarch.

BY MILTON BROUNER
Niles Service Writer
(Copyright, 1931, by NEA Service, Inc.)

The first of the Bourbon kings of Spain, Philip V, came to the throne in 1700, a mere youth of 17. He was, in effect, "willed" the monarchy by his predecessor, Charles II, who in an attempt to end the bitter wars of the Spanish succession signed a decree just before he died.

During his reign, which was dominated largely by the influences of his first and second wife, the establishment of a new era was started.

Reforms in finances, more up-to-date industrial methods and even sufficient government power to place law and order upon a firm footing were needed. In the forty-six years he ruled, Philip laid the foundation.

Endeared to People
His dashing appearance endeared him to his people early in his reign. His personal courage was a quality which won favor and admiration, much as the same trait helped the popularity of the last of the Bourbon Spanish kings, Alfonso XIII, who abdicated so recently and ended the reign of the Bourbons lasting 231 years.

Philip, until he was elevated to the throne, was Philip of Anjou. He married Marie Louise of Savoy, then only 14.

The first difficulties Philip faced were connected with his accession. As both he and his wife were French by birth, the Spaniards first resented his French accent and manners.

Popularity Turns Tide
It was fortunate they learned to like him. Archduke Charles effected an uprising against him and during the next twenty years all the great powers of Europe were either directly or indirectly involved.

Twice Charles invaded Spain and twice he occupied Madrid. At one time Philip was forced to flee across the border.

All seemed lost but in the end his popularity turned the tide. Inspired by his queen, Philip continued the fight. Indeed it was probable Marie Louise did more than Philip in molding the crown.

Once she sold her jewels to pay his debts.

Next: Queen Isabella II and Alfonso XII.

Hardships Wreck Health of Italian Airman in Brazil.

By United Press
RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, May 4.—A fight for health hardly less strenuous than his battle against the Sao Paulo jungles was being waged today by the young Italian nobleman, Count De Robilant, who has arrived after working his way to where he could board a steamship on the Paranapema river.

Di Robilant was not hurt in his forced descent in desolate country, as was his mechanic, Jose Quaranta, who subsequently died, but he suffered such hardships that physicians have ordered that for days he must lie quietly and rebuild his weakened body.

Mrs. Tyler's husband, Ralph Tyler, a city fireman; her mother and two sisters survive her.

SUN'S OUT AGAIN! TAKE YOUR GARDEN

Many Lots Still Awaiting Needy of City to Work on.

Cold weather for many days forestalled efforts of unemployed men to begin their gardens on lots assigned them by The Times, use free for the summer.

Now the sun is out again, and May promises to bring weather conducive to planting and growing. But still there are many lots offered by generous citizens for men who are without work to sow and reap what vegetables they will need for their families.

On the large tract at Sherman drive and Southeastern avenue more than half the lots still are awaiting men who are willing to work to feed their wives and children.

Ground Is Fertile
The ground is fertile, and each of the lots large enough to provide food for a family for several months.

Besides this ground there are other vacant lots in all parts of the city.

To several persons who asked for lots some time ago, but who have not yet received a letter telling them to begin work on this piece of ground or that, The Times Garden Editor wants to explain the reason is that no offers of ground have been made in neighborhoods in which they live.

Walk Isn't So Long
Not always can a lot near your home be obtained for you, although if the name of any owner of vacant ground is supplied The Times will try to obtain use of the land.

Some persons may have to take a piece of ground several blocks from your home, but if your family is hungry the daily walk won't seem so long.

Tell The Times Garden Editor how far you can go from home to till a vacant lot.

More Tests for Fokker
WASHINGTON, May 4.—The new type Fokker transport plane rejected by the navy department early in April will be further modified by the manufacturers and subjected to new tests, it was learned today.

Navy officials emphatically denied that Fokker's criticism of Admiral Byrd in the book, "The Fokker Dutchman," was a reflection on their rejection of the plane.

Pointing out that the aircraft first was declared "unstable" several months before publication of the book, they said that the rejection was "purely a routine matter."
