

BUTCHER FIEND IS SOUGHT IN GOTHAM KILLING

Dismembered Body Is Being
Recovered, Bit by Bit,
Scattered in City.

By United Press
NEW YORK, June 1.—Identity of a fiendish "sex butcher" and his victim whose dismembered body is being recovered bit by bit was sought after discovery of two packages Sunday containing additional parts of the butchered body.

The head, two forearms, two feet and two hands of a man about 35 years old, with curly brown hair, apparently fastidious in personal appearance, were in the packages found early Sunday in a vacant lot at Morgan avenue and Ten Eyck street, Brooklyn.

The victim had been dead at least two months, examining surgeons said, and police linked the discoverer, then with discovery previously of other parts of a human body, March 27 and April 12, in approximately the same sections of the metropolitan district.

Brutality Is Apparent

"Extreme brutality of the butcher was apparent," police said, "from the manner in which certain parts of the body were cut and hacked, as though with a meat cleaver or ax, leading to the conclusion the killing was a 'sex murder' of the most vicious type."

The packages found were uncovered by Policeman Cottileb Gauer and his father who had come to the vacant lot to seek top soil. One was wrapped in a New York Daily News of April 16, the other in a Brooklyn Daily Eagle of March 26.

The head was in one package. Other parts were in the second package.

Portions of Body Scattered

Still a third package found nearby contained a silk shirt, several pieces of a man's silk underwear, and a pair of women's bloomers.

The man, apparently five feet six inches tall, weighing 160 pounds, had carefully manicured fingernails.

Police believed other portions of the same man's body were those found March 27 and April 12, the first a thigh found wrapped in paper on the Brooklyn end of Williamsburg bridge.

A few days later a large section of a human chest was found in a nearby lumber yard, and the next day at the foot of Grand street in the East river a human calf, a thigh and two upper arms were found. Part of a buttock was found April 12 in Glendale.

Police theory was that the victim had been killed in New York, and the wrapped parts had been carried across Williamsburg bridge and thrown from an auto at intervals.

GARAGE, TWO AUTOS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Telephone Lines in Vicinity Put Out of Commission by Flames.

Fire of unknown origin today destroyed a two-story garage and two automobiles in the rear of the residence of K. C. Cookenour, 1106 West Thirty-first street.

Telephones in the vicinity were out of commission after the fire had destroyed lines. Firemen said they believed the fire was caused by spontaneous combustion originating from a large quantity of paint and supplies in one of the vehicles. Cookenour, however, said he thought the fire was due to faulty wiring.

Canadian Catholic Bishop Dies

O-O-O! Look What Paris Is Missing!

Everybody was happy when they sailed for a whoopee invasion of the European bright spots. But Texas Guinan, Broadway night club hostess, pictured here with some of her show girls, was alternately irate and hysterical when French officials boarded the liner at Le Havre and announced that the troupe would be barred from landing temporarily at least.

It seemed that there was some forbidding technicality about the French employment laws. And added to La Guinan's embarrassment was the report that she was on England's list of undesirable aliens.

FALLS STUNT FAILS

Barrel Is Imprisoned in River by Whirlpool.

By United Press
NIAGARA FALLS, Ontario, June 1.—William (Red) Hill was "all caught up" on his river stunts today.

Hill swore off river stunting after he had finished his trip in a barrel from the gorge whirlpool to Queenston Sunday, refusing to take the Niagara's dare when it imprisoned him in the whirlpool more than two hours Saturday and halted his scheduled ride at the halfway mark. "Now," Hill said when he climbed from the barrel at Queenston, "I'm all caught up. I've finished stunting on the river."

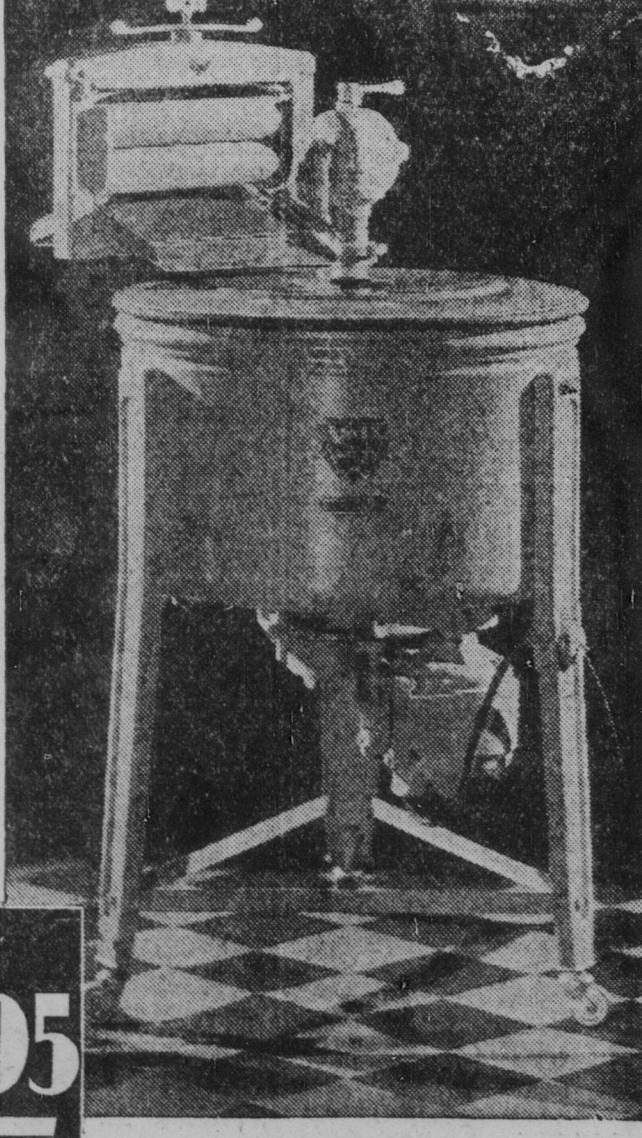

He had nearly drowned Saturday afternoon when his whirlpool-bound barrel leaked, filling to his shoulders before his 18-year-old son, William Jr., swam through the swirling waters to fasten a safety line to the 1,700-pound craft.

DEATHS OF 19 ARE PROBED IN POISONING CASE

Woman's Possible Victims
May Have Been Slain
for Insurance.

By United Press
CHICAGO, June 1.—Deaths of nineteen relatives and friends of Mrs. Margaret Summers were investigated today by authorities compiling evidence to be presented a grand jury with a request that murder charges be returned against the white-haired woman.

Four of the deaths were caused by arsenic poisoning, a coroner's jury held after the bodies were exhumed and examined by medical experts.

C. Wayland Brooks, assistant state's attorney, said evidence showed several others died "mysteriously."

Mrs. Summers was accused of causing the four deaths to collect insurance money. Her husband, a nephew and two roomers at her home were the victims named. They died within the last three years.

Four other husbands, a lover, two brothers and a small daughter were among the fifteen others who died mysteriously, according to a statement made to prosecutors by Mrs. William Meyers, Mrs. Summers' stepmother, of Effingham, Ill.

Brooks said he might subpoena Mrs. Meyers to tell her story before the grand jury.

The investigation had extended over the past twenty-five years of Mrs. Summers' life, starting with the death of her first husband, James Lynch, and a 3-year-old daughter.

Names of other persons believed to have been possible victims were found on a page torn from a Bible. Dates of death and amounts of insurance carried were listed with the names.

The list included the names of the husbands, of a street peddler who died in 1928, and the nephew, Thomas Meyers, who died two weeks ago.

GREEN PLEADS FOR DIVISION OF WORKERS' JOBS

Labor Chief Is Speaker at Dedication of Barbers'
Union Home.

Every worker's right to a job—part-time, if necessary—was defended stoutly by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in his speech at dedication of the new home of the Journeyman Barbers' International Union of America, Delaware and Twelfth streets, Sunday.

"Employment must be distributed evenly among all workers," Green declared, "whether industry is forced to a five-day, or a four-day week, or even less."

The labor head called on President Hoover to call a conference of national industrial, labor and economic leaders to shape up a new economic code insuring a fair share in labor for all workers. Unless such a change is accomplished, Green said, serious national unemployment will persist.

"The whole inequality is rooted in human selfishness and greed," he declared. "We cannot continue in this manner. There are to many industrialists who believe that because God worked six days in building the world they must work their men six days. Under present production methods this is unnecessary and impractical. Society does not owe any man a living, but it owes him a chance to work with the same security in his job that stockholders have in their investments."

United States Senator James J. Davis, former secretary of labor, made a vigorous declaration against wage reductions, and related that the "public forum" discussions of barber shops often echo in state legislatures and the halls of congress.

MORTON DOWNEY and TONY WONS on the Camel Quarter Hour

Every night except Sunday at 9:30 p. m., Indianapolis time over the Columbia Broadcasting System

ON the street of a million lights called Broadway has risen a bright new star, Morton Downey. To shop girls and debutantes, to men and women of every age, of every walk in life, the silver magic of his lilting tenor has won for him at twenty-nine, the plaudits of the most critical city in the world.

When he sang on the great stage at the Paramount Theater, crowds stormed the doors to hear him. At a popular night club where he was featured, dancers stopped to listen, held by the spell of his song.

Now Morton Downey brings his great gift to radio!

Every night, except Sunday, he will thrill America on the Camel Quarter Hour with a repertory of song over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

... still listenin'?

And the Master of Ceremonies—guess who
... None other than Tony Wons, better known to radio listeners as the inimitable Tony of "Tony's Scrap Book."

... still listenin'?

And behind it all, the soft steady throb of drums, the croon of saxophones and the muted melodies of brass; the new Camel Orchestra, directed by Jacques Renard. We think you'll like it. Tune them in tonight
