SEASON POT-ROAST WITH SUGAR AS WELL AS SALT

Combined Flavors of Sugar and Salt Blend Deliciously with Meat

These are days when there are always bargains on the meat counter. Last week, a boy who chose roast for 45 cents—made a tasty discovery by cooking it as follows:

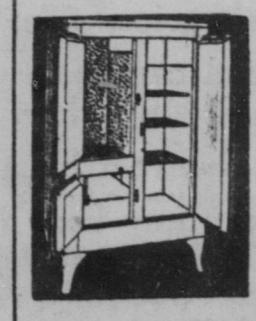

Sear and brown both sides of the meat in an iron or pot-roast kettle containing two or three tablespoonsful of fat. Then sprinkle top surface of the meat with sugar as salt. Add about a cupful of water, then cover the kettle and cook for an hour. Turn the meat and sprinkle newly exposed side with sugar and salt. Continue cooking until the meat is tender, adding just enough water to keep the gravy from burning. Serve with the gravy which remains in the kettle, thickened with flour if you wish. You'll be surprised at the unusual, full-bodied flavor in the meat as well as in the gravy.

Cheap cuts of lamb respond to this seasoning if you prefer that meat to beef. Vegetables are also more flavorful when a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt is added. Most foods are more delicious with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

They Tell Me

BY BEN STERN

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR ED BUSH, who can do more tricks with a gavel than Houdini did with handcuffs, came into town last week to sound out sentiment regarding his campaign for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Wearing a sunburn which he said got "planting corn," and mouthed several choice phrases intended to attract farmer support, would make no declaration that he is a candidate.

Instead, he protested that he had been to "planting corn" that he had no time to discuss or consider politics.

Taking advantage of the announcement of the many social functions for the visiting governors, Bush declared, casting his eyes about to see if any farmers were standing near to hear his statement: "Corn planting and society don't mix."

Then in a slightly louder voice, attempted to reach those across the street, he added:

"You can't plant corn in a spike-tailed coat."

Having done his bit to win the votes of the horny-handed sons of toil, Bush stopped for the non-existent applause he expected and then went on to say that no politics brought him from Salem.

"Just wanted to talk to a couple of friends here, that's all." But he did say that the real issue of the 1932 campaign in Indiana will be taxation.

He added that "the boys must have some concrete proposals for tax relief if they expect to get the farmers' votes."

"Promises won't go next time. Performance is what they expect."

Bush also lauded his own efforts toward attempting to obtain the passage of the corporate and personal income tax measures and indicated that his "friends" were urging him to become a candidate.

Adherents and supporters of the Lieutenant-Governor are out attempting to set up the fences for him, and are achieving some success in north central Indiana.

Along the lake front, however, his name is anathema to the industrialists, who have talked themselves into believing that his gavel waving and pounding for a corporate income tax was sincere.
