HAM TASTES BETTER WHEN BOILED OR BAKED WITH SUGAR

Sugar Combines Ideally with Salty Tang of Smoked Ham

There are few meats that can surpass ham in popularity. When it comes from the oven glazed with sugar and dotted with cloves, it is tantalizing to have to wait for a pink, savory-sweet slice.

To develop the flavor of ham to the utmost, put half a cup of sugar and half a cup of vinegar in the water in which your ham or whole ham simmers. Then after the ham is tender let it remain in the water until cool. The result is a delicious, savory flavor.

Ham, however, is but one of the many foods where sugar can be used to advantage. In seasoning meat steaks and pot-roasts, canned or fresh vegetables, a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt greatly improves the flavor. Salt by itself merely overcomes fatness. It is the sugar that "brings out" the flavor. Most foods are more delicious with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

VELVET JACKET POPULAR FOR NIGHT WEAR

Boleros of Vivid Color Gain Favor

By NEA Service
PARIS, June 4.—The evening wrap this season is expressed in the form of a jacket or bolero of vivid-colored velvet.

Its success is assured, especially during the summer months, for many reasons. It is colorful, young, and becoming, easy to wear and its lesser cost will permit most women to acquire more than one, or to transform an old, long wrap into a short, jaunty affair.

Almost as popular as velvet is the crepe de chine coat, also of vivid hue. It has to be a heavy quality crepe and is used in double thickness.

Several Colors Fashionable
Lacquer red, emerald, sage and lime green, some deep yellows and blues are among the fashionable colors. These can be worn with black and white as well as with a dress of the same color.

Some have a narrow band of fur outlining the neckline, others deep cuffs of fox, but usually they are without fur of any kind.

Chanel shows a number of fitted jackets reminiscent of the Eton jacket, in deep red and blue velvet with high, upstanding shawl collars of dark fur. These, however, are particular to this house.

The more sumptuous formula for an evening wrap is, by contrast, quite long, reaching almost to the hem of the dress, in some models.

Velvet Coats Show
In his mid-season collection Molyneux shows several black velvet coats trimmed with ermine that are luxurious looking.

Vionnet offers a long evening wrap of white velvet with a sable collar and another of flat white crepe, devoid of fur or trimming of any kind.

Pagani, always renowned for luxurious evening wraps, shows a marvelous coat in white crepe satin that has a deep cape collar hemmed with sable.

When the wrap is short, sleeves often are voluminous, and some long evening wraps show an almost tight sleeve. Very full sleeves have the fullness caught into a narrow wristband, others are shirred inside the arm to give a shorter effect.

Scarves Sleeves Used
Long and flowing scarf sleeves are seen, and Redfern has an attractive black velvet model with a full basque and seven-eighths sleeves, featuring the same circular volant.

Still another version of the evening wrap is made entirely of fur in the shape of an irregular, circular cape, with one end worn thrown over the shoulder.

These are shown in ermine, natural, and beige, others are of velvet, edged with ermine.

By MRS. WALTER FERGUSON

ONE of the funniest things that ever happened in this sometimes ludicrous land was the birth control debate between Mrs. Margaret Sanger and a Georgia supreme court judge, father of eighteen children.

The patriarch, who stood stanchly by a man's right to paternity, based his arguments on the Bible, as do all opponents of birth control.

Strangely, we have heard nothing from the mother of the eighteen. Or, perhaps we should say the several mothers, since the rearing of such a family usually calls for two or three women.

It seems unfitting that so many men should insist that contraceptive information is an evil, since not one of them ever has had a child. The chances are that if any such devoted gentleman was obliged to assume that responsibility, the protests would cease.

WHEN the last word has been said on this subject, we find that the men only theorized. The women know what they are talking about. They have experienced the deadly weakness, the paralyzing weakness, the sharp anguish that accompanies the birth of every mortal.

They know that having a baby is the least hard of the tasks of motherhood. They know that unless they are well and strong, they can not do justice to this supremely important job. They know there is a higher duty to one's children than merely to give them life.

Man set up this theory that the practice of birth control is a sin. As ever has been the case when he wished to dominate or oppress woman, he blithely has placed the blame upon his God.

Our sex has suffered endless humiliation because of the subtle use of the Christian creed as a weapon in the hands of the male.

What's in Fashion? Cool Summer Bedspreads

Directed By AMOS PARRISH

Yellow velvet spread with green ball fringe is used in this room with yellow point d'esprit curtains bound in green ribbon.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Keeping the bedroom looking as cool and airy as you want a summer bedroom to look isn't as hard as it sounds. Not even if it has a southern exposure and bright sun all day.

When you've put sheer, crisp curtains at the windows, taken up the winter rug and replaced it with small ones that let lots of bare floor show—you've made a good start.

But fashion's with you if you want to take a step further and make the bed itself look cool.

This month and next and next and next, light-colored, lightweight, easily washable, bedspreads are the fashion.

The kind of room your bedroom is easily decides the kind of spread you want. If its furniture is colonial, a candlewick spread is a good choice.

They're not new, of course. They were used in Colonial days and have been used a lot in the last few years since Colonial furniture has been in such high fashion favor.

They're still being used for this reason . . . and just because they're good looking and practical.

They're easy to wash and don't have to be ironed. Why? Because their background is usually unbleached muslin and it looks even better when it's a little wrinkly.

Flowered Chintz Good
On a cream muslin ground the wicking can be white, or any color that goes with the color of your room.

Another spread particularly summery, especially if your draperies are cretonne or chintz, or just ruffled ones, is one of flowered glazed chintz or saten.

But how about washing glazed chintz? Will it? First, it won't need to be washed very often, as the glazing helps it shed dust. It can be brushed satisfactorily.

Next, even if some of the finish washes out, you still have a chintz pattern spread, and the design is just as attractive unglazed.

Just about the coolest, freshest most feminine spread we've seen is one made by a woman at home, and she says she's not particularly clever at sewing, either.

Hers is of dotted Swiss, but it might be of voile, organdy, dimity, or figured marquisette—any sheer material, in fact. One like it is sketched on the bed in the bedroom scene.

Such lovely soft colors can be found in these materials and trimmings, too. Chintz bandings, flutings, cordings and ball fringe. And the sheer materials are especially smart made with a full gathered flounce and rows of tiny ruffles.

Another type that can be made at home or bought ready made is the applique spread. Quaint floral designs in soft pastel tints are cut out of muslin and appliqued on a colored cotton or unbleached muslin ground.

And a smart tailored spread—fine for a man's room—can be made of any plain material with the edges bound in color and a monogram placed in the center.

Others may look like Kotex but how are they made? . . . where? . . . by whom? You have a right to know.

WHEN a substitute claims to be "just like Kotex," ask where it is made. How, by whom. You will find the claim "like Kotex" usually means the pad merely looks like Kotex. That's not enough, when health is involved, as it is in your choice of sanitary protection. Demand the hygiene of Kotex. The absolute purity of Kotex.

There's one way to be sure. Get genuine Kotex . . . accept no substitute of whose makers you know nothing. Kotex is the world's standard. Hospitals used over ten million pads last year. It is made with hospital care and cleanliness.
