

BIGAMIST, HELD AS MURDERER, TO FACE COURT

Man Who Had Seven Wives Returned to Wisconsin for Trial.

By United Press
EAGLE RIVER, Wis., June 5.—George W. E. Perry, former Eagle River brakeman, was back in Wisconsin today to face authorities who accused him of murder, desertion and bigamy.

Smiling, and gracious to photographers, Perry Thursday night greeted more than 100 former neighbors who were waiting at the home of Sheriff Thomas MacGregor when Perry was returned from San Francisco where his arrest climaxed a nation-wide search.

At a preliminary hearing before Judge Alex Higgins in municipal court today it was expected Perry would be faced by his poverty-stricken wife and three children. Perry is expected to plead not guilty and waive preliminary hearing.

Hunted for Year
He deserted them nearly two years ago when he took a trip in which he is said to have married a half dozen women, one of whom authorities said he killed.

Search for Perry was started a year ago after an Indian trapper found the body of Mrs. Cora Belle Hackett-Perry near Lac Du Flambeau, Wis.

Evidence disclosed she had been last seen when she began her honeymoon with Perry. She had been shot in the back.

In Chicago Thursday, Perry was reported to have admitted marrying seven women.

'They All Wanted Me'
"They all wanted to marry me," Perry said. "Some waited for me for years. They didn't want anyone else but me."

He denied accusations that he had slain Mrs. Hackett.

Perry was arrested two weeks ago in San Francisco where he was living with his latest wife, Maria Gutierrez.

Perry is bald-headed, 50, stout, and has a cast in one eye.

CONSIDER CHILDREN FIRST, SAYS JUDGE

Too Many Rush Headlong to Divorce, Asserts City Jurist.

By Sheldon Key
Stigma that unsparingly touches the lives of tiny, innocent children is the most glaring evil of modern divorce, according to Superior Judge Clarence E. Weir of Marion county.

From his bench in superior room four, Judge Weir is imploring wives and husbands to "think of their children before they sue for divorce."

The judge thinks that divorces soon would decrease in number if parents would consider their offspring and remember that every child has a right to be well born and well reared.

"Most serious problem the court faces is what to do with children when their parents are separated," the judge declared. "Childless marriages do not worry us much."

Policy of Judge Weir's court is to allow the children to be placed in the home where environment is best. In most divorce cases, the children stay with the mother, especially if they are very young.

In his desire to protect children involved in one divorce suit this week, the judge told the father he might visit his children if he promised not to do so while under the influence of liquor.

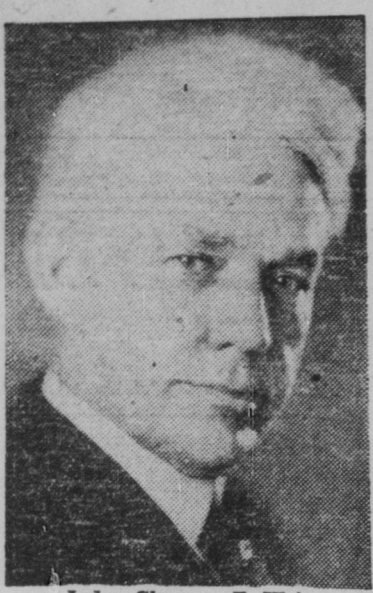

In another case, where mother and father both were deaf and dumb, he allowed the grandmother to take a small baby that she might teach to talk.

"I do wish that folks would consider the future of their children before bringing their difficulties into court," the judge said.

"A little thought as to what the future holds for their children would decrease divorces appreciably," Judge Weir's divorce doctrine emphasizes.

In many cases in which Judge Weir points out to parents their duties to their children, reconciliations are reached soon.

"Mothers usually display a keener and more sacrificing love for their babies than the fathers," Judge Weir says his experience has indicated.

FALL TOO ILL TO APPEAR FOR COURT ACTION

Ex-Interior Secretary in Danger of Death at Commitment Time.

By United Press
EL PASO, Tex., June 5.—Albert B. Fall, after a long and unsuccessful fight to clear his name of bribery charges, was ill today and at the mercy of the District of Columbia supreme court.

The former secretary of interior was facing formal commitment to prison, after conviction of accepting a $100,000 bribe in connection with granting naval oil leases during the administration of President Harding, but he was reported as "far too sick" to make the journey to Washington for commitment.

Dr. H. T. Safford, who examined Fall at the request of Frank J. Hogan's legal counsel, reported that: "Because of Fall's enfeebled condition, advanced age, and tendency to attack of broncho-pneumonia, I do not feel that his health is such as to permit him to go to Washington."

Hogan telegraphed that he was trying to get Fall a suspended sentence and had asked Atlee Pomerene of Cleveland, special prosecutor in the oil cases, to designate physicians at El Paso to ascertain Fall's condition.

Hogan also indicated his intention of asking a suspension of sentence.

COPS' SWITCH HELPS TRAFFIC

Reassignment Relieves Men of 'Entanglements.'

Reassignment of all police traffic officers to different posts last Tuesday has aided materially in reducing traffic congestion by relieving the officers of "entangling alliances," Captain Lewis Johnson said today.

The change was made, Johnson said, because when a traffic officer is assigned to one corner too long, he makes numerous friends who attempt to impose on him to overlook their cars, if parked too long, and to get stickers "fixed."

Similar changes will be made probably every two months. By

Scouts Morals

By United Press
TORONTO, Ont., June 5.—The Boy Scouts and the Y. M. C. A. "like parents, sometimes get too moralistic for the good of the children's mental health," Dr. Lawson C. Lowrey, director of the Institute in Child Guidance, New York, charged here today.

"I believe the Y. M. C. A. and Boy Scouts, the Y. W. C. A. and parents are very valuable aids to child training," he said, "but their overemphasis on morality sometimes causes neurosis in children."

Dr. Lowrey's statement came during a session of American psychiatrists in convention here.
