COURT IMPOSES TWO $5 FINES ON FIRE CHIEF

Noisy Hearing Results When Son Is Tried on Charge of Striking Girl.

By Times Special
EVANSVILLE, Ind., June 6.—Following a noisy scene in City Judge Eichel's court, caused by Fire Chief Carter, whose son, William, was on trial charged with assault on a girl, Judge Eichel imposed two $5 fines on the chief.
The case involved a $5,000 damage suit against young Carter.
Remarking that it appeared to be "six of one and a half dozen of the other," Judge Eichel dismissed the assault and battery charge. Miss Macer testified Carter blacked her eyes and bruised her head. He said she attempted to scratch him and pull his hair, and that he merely pushed her away.

Assaults Attorney

The disturbance during the trial started when the fire chief from the witness stand charged that an attorney offered to get the case quashed.

"I told him I'd go to hell on a hot rock before I'd pay a cent to anybody," the chief yelled. Efforts to calm him failed. The case was adjourned until Friday. Prosecutor Lynn asked for the name of the attorney.
"None of your business," Carter said. "I don't have to tell unless the judge tells me to."
After several more sharp exchanges, Carter said the attorney was Loren Kieley. In the meantime the court had imposed two $5 fines on Carter for contempt.
Lynn explained that he knew nothing of Kieley's interest in the case until Carter made the charge.
"Well, nobody's accusing you of getting any of it," Charles LaFollette, counsel for the son, retorted.

Declares Girl Drunk

The son said that he accompanied Miss Macer, Gilbert Eichel's daughter, and Miss Betty Kissinger. He said all partook of liquor.
"How drunk was the girl?" Carter was asked.
"Man, she was drunk as an owl," he replied.
At the conclusion of the trial, Fire Chief Carter made the charge, "If I have to pay $10 in fines, I'm going to pay $11 more for punching Loren Kieley in the nose."
Asked if he intended to force payment, Judge Eichel said, "I guess so."
Shortly after the city court hearing, Kieley filed the $5,000 suit for Miss Macer.

Second Trial of Murder Case to Open June 17

By United Press
MARION, Ind., June 6.—Failure to link a skull and torso found near here as parts of the same body, has resulted in preparations for a second trial of the murder of Edward Blotz, charged with first degree murder in connection with the death of Thomas Tucker.

Several vertebrae were removed from the skull and torso by Coroner O. L. Stout in an effort to identify the body, which the state charges, is that of Tucker. Prison authorities announced it was not Tucker's. Inability to find the fifth and sixth vertebrae prevented a positive comparison of the bones. Stout based his opinion on the state of preservation of the skull.
Blotz is in jail in Hartford City, where the case was taken on a change of venue. At the first trial, a jury disagreed, chiefly because of the failure of the state to prove the torso was that of Tucker.
