What's in Fashion?

Vases That Suit the Flowers
Directed By AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, June 20.—There isn't a flower so lovely that it can't be made lovelier still by the setting. Especially when it is taken from its native garden habitat and brought into the house—as people are doing these summer months.

Heresy? No! Not when you think of big velvety pansies trying to hold their heavy heads upright in a bud vase designed for a rose. Or of flaming tulips drooping wistfully in a too-shallow bowl.

There's a knack of arranging flowers attractively. But it's made twice as easy when containers are the right shape and size.

But there's even more than that to think of when you're choosing vases. There's color, for instance, and general character.

White Are Smart

White vases are one of the smartest... and at the same time most practical... kinds you can have about the home. Not transparent white, but opaque white—china, alabaster or pottery.

White accents are a fashionable decoration note, and white vases hold white flowers or colored ones in an equally decorative way.

A combination of crystal and black is easy to use effectively, too. And green, because it is one of nature's own most used colors.

But some of the most pleasant arrangements can be made with sharp color contrasts between flowers and containers. Yellow flowers in a lavender bowl, for instance. And the other way round. Dark blue blossoms in a turquoise vase. Light blue in a clear yellow holder.

Match Table Glasses

When you're planning flowers for the table, it's good to think of the color of your table glassware. In some of the new glass flower holders you can match your pet color scheme... and in various shapes and sizes.

Certain flowers just seem to go in certain types of containers. Lilies, for instance—lilies of the valley, fleur de lys, madonna lilies—lilies thought of as classic flowers because they were used so much in classic type designs.

And for them there's nothing more appropriate than a vase of the color of your table glassware. In some of the new glass flower holders you can match your pet color scheme... and in various shapes and sizes.

Mixed Garden Flowers

When you bring in a bouquet of mixed old-fashioned garden flowers here's hoping you have a vase of Early American type glass to put them in. One fashionable type—hobnail glass—is shown in the second group.

Or try them in some of the old-fashioned looking china bowls and vases, like the illustration next to the bottom.

Your zinnias, marigolds or other sturdy looking flowers go perfectly in a rather rough, peasant type holder.

The interesting clay basket shown at the lower right would make a good type for such flowers.

Shallow Pansy Bowl

But for pansies or water lilies that look their best when floating quietly, try a shallow, wide holder. The shell-shaped one in the second group is lovely, don't you agree? But there are many others, low and wide, that would hold them just as smartly.

One new good fashion is the use of vases in pairs, just as you'd use candlesticks on your mantel or table.

The cornucopia shaped vase of bubble glass shown at the left in the lowest group would make an effective decoration used this way, with two or three poppies or a bit of columbine or some other delicate flower.

Pewter Is Good

Glass, pewter, pottery, chinaware—they're all in fashion for vases and flower bowls. You can have them tall and slender, or tall and sturdy; straight or curved in line; utterly simple in shape, or as novel as you want them.

The main idea is to have them suit the flowers and the room they're to be used in.

Sandals Are Ideal for House Wear

BY ALICIA HART

If a lot were passed to make women wear barefoot Japanese sandals for housewear, it would be an outright blessing to American feet.

Without any such law, why don't you try them this summer? They are cool, pleasant, lightweight and best of all, they are so airy. Your feet will feel 100 per cent better for going bare part of the time.

Moreover, just let yourself get a pair of sandals and look at your feet in them. I'll wager every one of us will see to it that our feet get better care hereafter!

Think of a Pedicure

The first thing you are likely to think of is a pedicure. Why should not your toenails look as nice as your fingernails?

You can give yourself a pedicure very easily. Just like a manicure, only you need pedicure scissors instead of manicure scissors, and you will need to work hard to push back the cuticle from each toenail. For most of them have had lifelong neglect.

Right now there is a great vogue for Chinese pedicures. They tint the toes and give you a glamorous feeling.

Money Is Well Spent

But the scientific American pedicure which soaks the feet first, works hard to obliterate all corns and callouses, is far superior. If you could indulge in one pedicure and learn how it is done you will find the money well spent.

You will feel lightfooted. And you will do your stockinged sandals with real pride because your feet will look so nice.

Don't mind it if your feet get dirty around the house. It is so easy to scrub them up. And as far as that goes, your feet are entitled to the best of dirt and probably never have had it!

Soak Feet Thoroughly

To give yourself a pedicure, after soaking your feet thoroughly, follow these directions:

1. Use some good cuticle remover, on cotton over an orange stick.
2. Then cut the nails and file them, watching carefully that no corner or nail is left jutting into the flesh.
3. Treat all corns and blemishes.
4. Scrub with a brush and then dry carefully and apply either liquid or powder which you shine with a buffer.

Just Every Day Sense

BY MRS. WALTER FERGUSON

In the Union Signal, official organ of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, we find this quotation from Professor Irving Fisher of Yale university:

"So far as I can ascertain, after diligent and thorough search, there is no economist in the United States who does not view that the nation has gained enormously in an economic sense from prohibition."

Even this, however, may damn the law with faint praise. And it is hard to believe that the W. C. T. U. with all its high idealism and its splendid past record, will be content to consider prohibition from a merely economic basis.

What of the souls of our children? What of the honor of our men and women? What of universal and flagrant disregard for law? What of the hypocrisy that Volsteadism has bred in our statesmen?

We may gain billions of dollars, but what will that not recompense for the finer things we have lost? There must be something more valuable than money, even in the existence of nations.

THE behavior of many of our citizens, great and small, poor and rich, is decidedly sophomoric. We pass laws assiduously to make ourselves good. Yet one need travel no farther south than the Mexican border to witness the ignoble sight of our countrymen gambling on a big scale and drinking to excess.

Much of the money we have made on prohibition we seem bent on spending on carousals in foreign lands, and we indulge abroad the very customs that we legally deny ourselves at home.

Shiploads of passengers leave our ports every week intent on drinking their way around the world. All this not only is shameful, but childish. We are paying a high price for any economic gains and have become the laughing stock of other nations.

In every home where the housewife brews her ale, and in every city where foreign-born enrich themselves at our law's expense, we see a general disintegration of American standards.

Why have we made money on prohibition, perhaps, but we have gained it at the loss of decency and honor.

Miss Alvina Zimmerman, 2215 South Delaware street, is spending two weeks visiting in Evansville.

FINANCIAL AID ASKED BY TWO STEAMER LINES

U. S. Shipping Board Gets Urgent Pleas of American Firms.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, June 19.—The United States shipping board today had before it appeals from two of the nation's premier steamship companies for financial assistance to tide them over the depression.

The imperiled companies are the United States Lines, largest operator of American passenger vessels, in the North Atlantic trade, whose ships include the Leviathan, George Washington and America, and the Munson interests, prominent in the Caribbean and intercoastal trade.

The United States Lines own the shipping board over $11,000,000 for vessels purchased from the government. In addition, construction loans on two super-liners now being built for the company at Camden, N. J., soon will become effective.

A payment of over $1,000,000 will be due the board and it was indicated the government body is considering granting an extension.

A final decision as to whether or not the board will definitely go to the assistance of the company is expected within the next two weeks.

The appeal of the Munson company again was placed before the board today, but there was no indication that the government would consider financial aid to the firm.

At the Reformed church, the Rev. George P. Kehl will speak on "Believe in the Communion of Saints."

"Comrades of the King" will be the morning subject of the Rev. F. C. Wacknitz of the Second Evangelical church.
